Panels of trained volunteers then review applicable programs to allocate dollars based on effectiveness and efficiency. 89.2% of this program's expenses were allocated to agencies and programs in 2009. Finally, these programs are tracked throughout their three-year funding cycle to ensure ongoing success in achieving desired outcomes. Additional activities include: train funded agency staff to identify and measure program outcomes, participate with community-wide planning groups to coordinate impact, promote advocacy of education, income and health issues, and recruit and train volunteers to support program activities.
