adults in need of guidance and strong role models. About 40,000 individuals were served through the distribution of over 138,600 books. These books emphasize key areas of virtue and moral struggle including (1) to base one's life on service to others through work and ordinary activities, (2) promoting a positive view of the roles and importance of all persons, including the elderly, and the protection of all human life, and (3) the strengthening of family life as the primary way to improve the social, economic, and moral life of US society.

Scepter's criterion for selection of its works comes from Christian teachings of charity and service to others and the community. Certain publications are based on the charism and writings of Saints and teachings of the Catholic Church in order to develop and distribute books that teach a positive approach to deepen and develop virtue and habits that improve the life of the family and the community.

During 2009 Scepter released a number of publications, including "The Work of Children" to help children understand the meaning, purpose, and value of work, and "Thomas More, A Lonely voice Against the Power of State" which explores the conscience and motivation of one of the most admired persons in history.

Other Scepter titles on the subjects of prayer, religious practice, family advice and parenting, moral education, and Bible study continue to expand, with over 130 titles available. Also, Scepter provides free booklets online on many of the same topics.

As an ongoing service to society, Scepter continues to provide free books to prisoners in the U.S. upon written request.

Research has shown that although the average recidivism rate for prisoners is 70%, those who make a religious conversion in prison and seek help to maintain it have an extremely low likelihood of returning to crime upon their release.

Prisoners request any number of books, whether Bibles,

Bible study commentaries, prayer books, or books explaining religion and encouraging the practice of prayer and virtue.

Also, from time to time Scepter will donate Bibles and prayer books to worthy non-profits.

Scepter's aim is to encourage personal improvement and educate its readers on how to improve ones life and other's lives through service and charity to others applied in ones ordinary situation, informed by ones religion and the positive habits and behavior of living ones faith in and through normal responsibilities and work.
