Form 990, Part III: Statement of Program Service Accomplishments 2009

Organizational Overview:

In 1989, in response to alarming poaching rates of black rhinos in Zimbabwe, a group of concerned individuals and institutions founded the International Black Rhino Foundation to assist in the conservation of black rhinos through efforts in the wild and in captivity. In part because of the International Black Rhino Foundation's support, poaching was virtually eliminated and Zimbabwe's black rhino population began to stabilize.

In 1993, recognizing that the escalating crisis facing all five rhino species was not receiving the attention it deserved, the International Black Rhino Foundation expanded its mission and became the International Rhino Foundation (IRF). For the last 17 years, IRF has funded and operated rhino conservation programs in Africa and Asia, focusing expertise and resources in areas where rhinos are most in need of protection, and where conservation efforts will have the most significant impact.

IRF also works with conservation centers and zoos to provide linkages between captive and wild populations of rhinos, with the ultimate objective of helping captive populations become a truly integral part of conservation strategies for rhinos. Since its founding, IRF has provided funding for scientific research that enhances the ability to manage rhinoceros populations both in the wild and in captivity.

At the heart of IRF's vision is the belief that these magnificent species should endure for future generations, and that protecting rhinos ensures the survival of many other species that share their habitat, including people.

Summary of 2009 Programs and Projects:

Zimbabwe Rhino Conservation – The IRF-supported Lowveld Rhino Trust manages rhino monitoring and anti-poaching units in Zimbabwe. Its rhino operations team anesthetized and treated 72 rhinos in 2009. Treatments ranged from wire snare removal and pre-emptive horn removal to reduce the risk of poaching, to translocations of animals from high-risk poaching areas to safer conservancies. With poaching reaching a 15-year high in 2009, the Trust is increasingly being forced to undertake emergency operations to rescue rhinos. Fifty-three emergency translocations took place in 2009, and six orphaned calves were hand-reared.

Selous Black Rhino Project, Tanzania - Black rhinos were believed to be extinct in the Selous until 1990, when black rhino tracks were detected. IRF's partner, the Selous Rhino Trust, was then able to confirm that a viable population of black rhinos exists in the Selous. The Selous Rhino Trust, along with the Tanzania Wildlife Department, surveys and monitors rhinos in the Selous to determine population, distribution and status and to assure their long term security. A team of 12 rangers regularly patrols and carries out basic anti-poaching activities, also reporting on animal sightings and signs of potential threats. At least 19 black rhinos have been confirmed in the northern part of the Reserve and signs of at least another 20 have been found in limited surveys in the south.

India Rhino Conservation – IRF provided support for implementing Indian Rhino Vision 2020, a collaborative effort among the government of Assam (India), WWF -India, and IRF with the goal of increasing the population of Indian rhinos to 3,000 by the year 2020 and translocating animals in order spread the population out more evenly over at least seven national parks. The success of this program is heavily dependent on both government and community support and involvement. IRF and partners are working with local community organizations and government as well as park authorities to implement the IRV 2020 recommendations. Translocations planned for 2009 could not take place due to problems with procurement of the immobilization drugs. IRF funded construction of a fence to keep rhinos from straying out of Manas National Park in 2009, which has also led to significant increase in support from local communities as the fence has eliminated conflict with rhinos, as well as allowing farming in areas previously subject to intense elephant crop-raiding.

Indonesian Rhino Conservation – IRF supports three major rhino conservation initiatives: Rhino Protection Units (RPU)s rigorously patrol forests to destroy snares and traps (the main made of poaching for these species) and apprehend poachers. By gathering intelligence from local communities, RPUs also proactively prevent poaching attempts before they take place. RPUs have been very effective in protecting the rhino from poachers - only five Sumatran rhinos have been lost to poachers since the inception of the program, and no Javan rhinos have been killed. By virtue of the RPUs' consistent presence and patrolling, other species, such as Sumatran tigers and elephants also benefit, as does the ecosystem as a whole. Eight patrol units operate in Bukit Barisan Selatan National Park in Sumatra, one of the highest priority areas for Sumatran megafauna. Approximately 60-85 Sumatran rhino (the second largest population in the world) inhabit the Park, along with 40-50 Sumatran tigers and around 500 Asian elephants. Five patrol units operate in Way Kambas National Park, which has a resident population of 40+ Sumatran rhino (the third largest population of Sumatran rhinos) and is also the site of the Sumatran Rhino Sanctuary. Four RPUs protect Javan rhinos in Ujung Kulon National Park, where the only viable population of the species exists (estimated between 38 and 44 animals).

The Sumatran Rhino Sanctuary (SRS) encompasses 100 hectares (247 acres) for propagation, research and education, and received its first rhino in 1998. Until recently, the Sanctuary held only one pair of animals, which were not reproductively sound. The SRS is now home to five animals and is staffed by two full-time Indonesian veterinarians, ten keepers, and several administrative and support staff. Over the years, a number of circumstantial, medical, and management problems have been addressed and overcome. As a result, within the last decade, the husbandry and captive propagation of Sumatran rhinos has passed from its infancy to its adolescence. The IRF has been steadfastly working to address these issues with the expertise of numerous veterinarians and reproductive biologists.

Javan Rhino Conservation - Ujung Kulon National Park is home to the only remaining viable population of Javan rhinos in the world – no more than 44 animals. IRF works closely with Yayasan Badak Indonesia (YABI), its implementing partner in Indonesia, WWF-Indonesia and the local, provincial, and national government towards the species' conservation. In June 2009, IRF and partners funded a survey (including rapid habitat and social-cultural assessments) which recommended an initial expansion of the Javan rhino range into the Gunung Honje area of Ujung Kulon National Park. (Javan rhinos currently wander into this area occasionally, but there is not a resident population.) IRF is working to obtain formal approval of the Government of Indonesia for this expansion so that work can begin, including clearing the site for an electric fence and adjacent patrol road, constructing small bridges and the electric fence, habitat management such as clearing and planting rhino food plants and providing for a water supply and saltlick, constructing new guard posts, hiring guards and other staff, and socialization work with local communities.

Rhino Conservation Medicine Program - IRF's Rhino Conservation Medicine Program (RCMP), a collaboration among IRF, Fossil Rim Wildlife Center, and Cornell School of Veterinary Medicine, which provides veterinary expertise to the Sumatran Rhino Sanctuary (SRS). RCMP staff provide advanced training for SRS vets and Indonesian students on rhino veterinary knowledge and skills. The RCMP also provides training opportunities for Cornell University students, residents and faculty in field conservation medicine, melding medicine principles with global health and conservation issues to link wildlife health, ecology, domestic animals and people.

Technical Assistance – IRF provided funding to other rhino-focused groups, including support for the Chairman and Scientific Officer of the IUCN/SSC African Rhino Specialist Group, Chairman of the IUCN/SSC Asian Rhino Specialist Group, the Rhino Resource Center (a central repository for rhino information), and funding for a Large Mammal Conservationist for the Wildlife and Areas Welfare Trust in India.

Research - As part of its commitment to rhino conservation research, IRF issued a request for pre-proposals, and invited 11 of the 30 pre-proposals received to submit a full proposal for funding consideration. Pre-proposals and proposals were reviewed by independent outside researchers and five were selected for grant awards, with a total of $240,325 awarded. The projects are: Radio frequency identification system for monitoring wild rhino populations ($25,000); Pan-African physiogeography and evolutionary history of the black rhinoceros ($53,945); Population genetic monitoring of Indian rhino in Assam: an evaluation of genetic diversity and population differentiation through non-invasive sampling ($55,100); Effects of acid-base, electrolyte, energy and cardiorespiratory imbalances during capture and confinement on boma adaptation in white rhinos ($36,280); and Genetic estimates of Javan and Sumatran rhino population size and sex ratio using fecal samples - building on recent progress ($70,000).
