The organization has over 260 members, and seeks the solicitation of funds from the general public and members.

The board of directors each year reviews research papers, and proposals for research on human behavior.

The board from the various submissions determines the recipients of the Mealey and Aldis grants. The society in addition prints a quarterly bulletin, and in alternate years has either a general member congress or educational summer program. At these events there are society meetings, speakers, and papers presented on human behavior.
