The Pendleton Round-Up Foundation contributes to various educational, research, and community activities in the local and surrounding areas. Special events are organized to collect donations that will go towards other non-profits such as the Justin Cowboy Crisis Fund that provides support to severely injured rodeo contestants and the Tough Enough to Wear Pink program to be donated to support cancer research. In addition to supporting area activities through contributions, the Foundation also loans personal property to the community to facilitate an annual commemoration depicting life of the early explorers and Native Americans in the 1800's.
