The NEDA Informational and Referral Helpline and website are nationwide, free resource linking sufferers and their loved ones to vital information, support and a referral database of over 800 eating disorders treatment professionals. NEDA provided 40 live hours of helpline service each week thanks to dozens of trained volunteers.

The Helpline characteristically receives a significant increase in call volume during National Eating Disorders Awareness Week (annual the last week of February). This past year the Helpline experienced the predicted increase in calls beginning in January with an even higher peak in number of calls in February than in previous years. This increase over previous years is easily understood as reflecting the

National Eating Disorders Awareness Week (NEDAwareness Week)
National Eating Disorders Awareness Week is the largest collaborative eating disorders outreach effort in the nation and has expanded to many countries throughout the world. Thousands of community partners distribute NEDA's educational materials and coordinate outreach activities that attract public and media attention to the severity of eating disorders, signs and symptoms, and their biological basis. Held annually since 1987, there were 1800 Participants registered in 2010 representing all 50 states as well as 23 other countries. Participant registration has seen a 400% increase in the last 2 years which reflects NEDA's participant retention goal as well as new participant participation. A past NEDAwareness Week participant access to quality care.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4a, Program Service Accomplishments:

record number of participants in the NEDAwareness week this year. The website provides free to the public our toolkits for parents and educators. The next fiscal year will see the completion of our coaches and athletic trainers toolkits. In addition, it lists the many eating disorder specialists and treatment program for the referrals.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4b, Program Service Accomplishments:

reported, " I know that in my college community, a lot of people are suffering in silence, so if anything, at least, I think that NEDAwareness Week allowed them to see that they didn't have to suffer in silence." While another stated, "I have had countless people come up to me with questions and concerns on how to help themselves and others around them. Just today a teacher told me how much it made him "think." It is such a widespread issue and yet is so often overlooked. I am so happy that my school was made aware of the dangers of eating disorders." The promotional and public relations efforts that go toward this annual week result in millions of media impressions representing outreach to the general public.
