Form 990, Page 2, Part III, Line 1 (continued)

Briefly describe the organization's mission:
the appropriate organizations to continue the work that fills the gap, set examples within a community, and create easy models to follow.

PURPOSE: Teams Together was organized for charitable, religious, educational, literary, and scientific purposes in the world, including, for such purposes, the making of distributions to individuals, or to organizations that qualify as exempt organizations under the meaning of Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, or the corresponding section of any future federal tax code.

OBJECTIVE: Teams Together is a group of forerunners; we think outside the box to evaluate a need vs. a want, then network the appropriate organizations to continue the work that fills the gap, set examples within a community, and create easy models to follow. Our process and assistance models give a hand up, teaching skills and offering direction with emphasis to give back.

We have found our philosophy of creating a model to give a helping hand up instead of a hand-out, creates ownership, personal development and integrity for those we serve. Our disaster model evaluates gaps to be filled in the specific community, network resources, create a specific model and turn over to the locals to continue the work for long-term positive effects within their community.

We evaluated our program effectiveness this year and found that our models were able to assist community volunteers from those we served from within 3 months to 3 years for more severe cases.

OUR PROGRAM FOCUS FOR 2010:

Families in Crisis Programs:

We support upper working-class families and individuals through a crisis. We often find that these families are able to sustain themselves for 6 to 8 months, as they live on a combination of savings, credit cards, family assistance, and company health plans. As their personal resources expend over time, they struggle with where to turn, since they do not qualify for public assistance. That's where we come in, through word of mouth.

We offer "assistance with dignity" to the working class in need; to get them through their crisis. We assist them with creative ways to make it through, offer emotional support, and network resources of where to find temporary assistance. They do not "live in the system", so it is difficult for them to find a way through the maze of resources. We give them "a hand up" to make it through to the other side.

Our success is when you watch them break through their crisis to the other side of living, not merely surviving; but being productive citizens and having their life back so that they can in turn, help others up as they were helped.

Families in crisis Project: (individuals, Women and Children, Women return to the Workforce, Thanksgiving and Christmas, El Refugio)

Our volunteers worked with several families, orphanages, elderly and children. From food gift cards, gas cards, helping with utilities after a death in the family due to cancer, food, insurance payment, and general needs with a helping the working class with a hand up, as well as educating them how to carry on. They were adults struggling to keep their families together after losing their jobs and/or key family members and could not find their way out of their situation long-term. We assisted them with resources to carry them through their financial short-fall, as well as guided them into alternate jobs with the skills they have.

As an example, when asked to help serve a community devastated by a local leader dying with cancer, our volunteers stepped in when the family was left incapable of making decisions any longer due to the ongoing stress of cancer. We stood by the family and leader during their last breath of life, lending comforting words as well as accommodating physical needs necessary to be as comfortable as possible through the death process. We were there with the family after their loved one was called home. These times are difficult, even when planned. The reality hits, and you cannot think clearly any longer. Having spent years developing a relationship with the family, we were able to step in to assist in funeral arrangements where the family had lost hope and, a loved one; fear and anger had set into their minds to where they could not make decisions clearly. No one expects someone to go through death of cancer alone, but with dignity, love, respect and honor. That is what we exemplified to their community for such a tragic loss to a shortened life.

The measure of effectiveness was after helping them once, we pointed them into the right direction to help themselves, so that they are not dependent on the governmental system, but self-sufficiently.

Wigs-For- Cancer Event Project:

By getting local television and radio coverage of the event, community awareness was created of the project. Each year the project grew where we were able to hand it over to the volunteers that spent endless hours making this a special day for those living through a tragic time in their life. We helped the group set up their foundation, and now they continue their efforts to give cancer survivors a sense of well-being and get back on their feet in their community to love life.

Training, Research and Internship Program

Our training programs are a one-on-one, individualized approach to help adults go forward in a new career path, while re-building up their employability, one project at a time.

We have worked with underemployed, older employees that found themselves in downsizing corporations, over-stressed, and/or walking through the journey of medical recovery. We offer them small tasks to rebuild their confidence, help overcome their stress level of inadequacy, and allow them to experience accomplishments once again. We encourage them to find an income source that fits their needs and talents. The process requires a lot of patience and discernment on our part, but we evaluate each individual's needs and encourage them to move forward as we creatively and lovingly help them through their journey.

The success is when you watch them break through their crisis to the other side of living, not merely surviving; being productive citizens and having their life back so that they can help others as they were helped.

Re-Training & Research projects

These projects help mature adults who have lost their jobs due to downsizing/layoffs, learn new skills to get back into the work force after medical treatments, or when just starting over. Individuals in this group may have low self-esteem, lack concentration and focus skills, need mentoring and require great patience to sort out their mental processing again. We encourage them by giving them small victories in a job skill. We give them short-term goals with quick results until they are able to seek income on their own, or if not, we refer them to agencies that will help them.

The success is measured on the progress of each individual. These were once high-producing people in the job market, and due to unfortunate circumstances in their lives, the level of stress overtook their minds of processing and reasoning. When a person is able to stay in the job market successfully, we know it was a job well done on our part. When a person is unable to stay in our training and mentoring program, we know it is time to have the appropriate agency step in for assistance to that individual.

TRAVEL PROJECT:

We expanded our research program into training displaced working adults in the business of travel. The world of travel has brought these adults back to life again. The excitement of helping others with a trip of a life time or a gathering of friends breathes life back into their spirit so that they can begin to live and dream again.

This project not only allows us to re-train displaced workers, but will be income generating for other projects.

WAVE MISSIONS PROJECT:

This program is designed to use boats that are donated for delivery of supplies for disaster relief, food, medical supplies, school supplies and computers from our 501-c-3 Technologies Program. We also network sailors and suppliers with countries in need. By doing this, we were able to ship supplies donated by individuals for Haiti orphanage schools before the earthquake with our volunteer sailors and use of their boats.

Our boat donation project allows us to use boats in serviceable order, teach Boater Safety courses and teach New Boater and maintenance classes. During this course, trainees repair and service boat for either our use or prepare for sale to help fund the project.

The Wave Missions Project is managed by an individual that we gave a venue for a hand up: he is now giving back to his community with the help of Teams Together.

LOGAN PROJECT:

The Logan project is a multi-purpose property.

For women, it is a place to mentor young women with practical teaching home budgets, cooking on a budget, meals in 30 minutes or less, shopping on a budget, housekeeping techniques, gardening, sewing/mending, decorating on a budget with style, taking care of you, phases in a woman's life, child bearing and child rearing, as well as preparing and hosting weddings.

Older men mentor young men with practical teaching of auto mechanics, house maintenance, welding carpentry, yard work, cabinetry, sports, how to be a man of integrity, managing money and multiplying it.

The Logan project is also a place to rent for book writing, leaders to get away from it all for a few days rest and reflection, study or prepare for final exams, or write dissertation paper.

Teams Together advised and helped fundraise to assist the Logan project with its inception. They are now running the project as their own and growing in effectiveness within their community.

501-c-3 TECHNOLOGIES PROJECT:

Our refurbishing program was started by an individual that we gave an opportunity to get back into the working force at his own pace. We have been developing the concept to refurbish donated computers from corporations, and offer a training program for individuals that cannot afford a computer system to volunteer and earn credits towards a system.

The Training Program allows individuals to learn how to refurbish donated computers and allows them a hand up in the marketplace to be employable again. They are also eligible to earn credits towards their own computer system.

Our Volunteer Program allows individuals to earn credits towards a computer by working in our Refurbishing Center. They work at their own level of competency: customer assistance, receive donations, stock shelves, or janitorial. This part of the program allows them to have ownership with their computer, not another hand out; it costs them something.

We are now a recognized Microsoft Refurbisher, which allows us to pre-install genuine Microsoft software, that recipients would normally need to purchase in addition to their new computer.

After receiving eligibility of their computer, classes are available to learn how to use their new computer, software and maintaining it. At any time, recipients may volunteer for credits to upgrade their software. They are only eligible for a new computer every 3 years unless special circumstances are met. This is a three-fold solution: reducing e-waste by re-purposing re-training individuals, and help those in need obtain an updated computer to assist their school or work with dignity.

ALTERNATIVE ENERGY PROJECTS:

Our Alternative Energies Projects are more than wind, solar, technology and green: it's also re-purposing, and researching effective new energy sources. We think outside of the box: with our projects, with our training and with our resources.

Teams Together Research Teams are looking for new ideas, technology inventions and solutions so that we can also serve our disaster relief projects more effectively. By using renewable energy sources, we minimize the environmental impact on already damaged areas. We have found during our disaster relief, that most areas are not accessible for trucks to resupply normal energy sources, so our teams are looking to fill that gap from main-stream thinking.

During our review with disaster relief teams last summer, we also were looking how to improve our assistance and further help communities with Alternative Energy. We have been working on a new energy source and spoke with several engineers about our development, which confirmed our technology was viable. We are in the stages of obtaining funding to further our research, patent and develop a prototype of our energy source.

We will use our model in disaster relief efforts before mass marketing. Our product will have many uses: disaster relief agencies, third world countries, rural areas, space, military and recreation – to name a few.

Internship projects:
HP INTERNS:

This program gives displaced working adults the opportunity to have their own computers while building a team to assist in a project and manage the progress. The computers allow them to use Project Manager (software used in many large corporations), which improves productivity, broadens their computer skills, communication and responsibility. With the use of computers, they are also able to share information virtually.

The measure of success is the excitement we see with their learning process, learning to work together and share work, and standard of work. Each person building a team trains others to take over their responsibilities so that the core team can move on to other projects. It is a perpetual program.

DISASTER RELIEF PROGRAM:

Presently, we are researching inventions of new power sources through our Alternative Energy Project that will assist our Disaster Relief Project efforts. During our evaluation of this project, we saw a pattern of gaps among disaster relief agencies that we are addressing within ourselves, and lack of energy is something that needs immediate resolution: you cannot depend on a truck or semi to deliver any goods, services, power, tents or food.

Relief coordination is what we addressed during our efforts during Katrina/Rita. We wrote and submitted a plan that was funded, adopted by locals and still running today that directs donations to one location. The locals, who know everyone and the needs in their community, work this facility for better distribution of goods. The program that we developed provided local new jobs and caused them to work together with their community in mind and not focus on the tragedy of the storm in their own lives.

Teams Together actively fill in the gaps and network with other agencies for needs to be met. We work together to empower people to overcome obstacles that threaten their well-being. We give hands-on approach and set a model that can be carried on at the local level.

Every year we see disaster happening in historical proportions. As we are all aware, financial assistance is needed for the grass root non profits to assist where the larger non profits fall short. We are able to create positive change in an impossible situation. These on-the-ground efforts make the largest impact in communities, to free up the larger agencies to serve the broader needs.
