The purpose of the Organization will be, among things, to advance the scientific and technological knowledge and research developed by universities and other scientific research institutions that are exempt from federal income tax under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the "Code"), by undertaking various activities.

iBridge Network

The Organization is working to advance innovation in the United States by focusing primarily on the iBridge Network (the "Network"). Through a web-based application and related services, the Network provides the research community an additional channel through which to disseminate discoveries, research methods, and findings and provides users access to research that may have otherwise been lost. By increasing awareness of existing research across the country and facilitating exchanges among those who are conducting and/or using the research, the Network aims to expand the number and scope of collaborative relationships. Universities may use the iBridge Web site to license and distribute a variety of items, including software, research tools, databases, teaching materials, surveys, and reference materials. Posting may include a variety of research material and descriptions of ongoing research activities. The Organization provides training with respect to utilizing the iBridge Web site and provides educational symposia on topics relating to fostering innovation and technology transfer. Currently there are over 6,500 research projects listed on the Network, and 83 institutions participating in the iBridge program. There were an estimated 80,000 visits to the website as of June 30, 2010.

Kenotomeo

Kenotomeo was a program working with the SBIR (Small Business Innovation Research) to offer a mentoring program for entrepreneurs involved with spinning out university innovations. There was no activity for this program during the year ending June 30, 2010 except for payment of a few expenses from a prior year.

Translational Medicine Alliance

The Translational Medicine Alliance was formed to focus on translational issues and understanding the potential for collaborations between philanthropists, universities, scientists, and pharmaceutical companies. The Alliance hosted a forum on May 13-15, 2009 in Philadelphia with one of the goals being to bring together For-Profit and Not-For-Profit organizations to explore and better understand how vertical collaborations might work across life science fields and to influence policy making. The conference had a total of 222 attendees. KIN's involvement with this initiative focuses on researching, understanding, and developing programs around these more effective models for translational medicine.
