EXEMPT PURPOSE ACHIEVEMENTS

Mission and Values: The mission of the Concord Community Music School (CCMS) is to foster a sense of community through music by providing the fullest possible array of musical experiences for people of all ages, musical abilities, and backgrounds. Our core values are: artistic excellence; access for all; musical friendships; lifelong musical learning; and faculty recognition, respect, and development. A full member of the National Guild of Community Schools of the Arts, the Music School draws its mission from roots in the Settlement House movement a century ago, through which music programs delivered by outstanding artists helped build a community for people from diverse backgrounds.

Access for all: CCMS has been committed to a mission of access throughout its history, steadily building the Financial Aid Fund for students in the home facility, and creating a new program delivery model, the Music in the Community Initiative (MICI), to reach those who cannot travel to Concord. In FY10, financial aid in the amount of $201,317 supported nearly 600 of CCMS' weekly students, made possible through those two programs: $101,677 in financial aid supported 149 students from families with income levels of 100-250% of federal poverty level, who studied at the Concord facility; and $99,640 of free instruction was provided to 435 weekly MICI students. MICI works through ongoing partnerships with human service agencies and public schools statewide to pro-actively seek out those who otherwise would not participate because of income, disability, or distance. When the number of financial aid students who study in Concord is added to the number of weekly students at partner sites, most of whom are low-income, the commitment to serve the entire community is clear, as 48% of CCMS weekly students received free or reduced-cost instruction because of financial need.

As New Hampshire's population has become more diverse, CCMS faculty were among the first to work with Manchester's refugee and immigrant community, beginning in 2001. Faculty who gained experience in Manchester now work with the more recently arrived African refugees in Concord, in programs such as an African drumming and dance series co-led by our percussion faculty and a Rwandan dance teacher (mother of three of our chorus students).

Participation of individuals with special needs: Faculty have learned new skills to serve all who come through our door, including older students needing adaptive technologies, and students who are blind, have impaired speech due to stroke, or who have developmental disabilities or mental illness. Two certified music therapists serve on the faculty, who work with individuals with autism, profound disabilities, and mental health needs.

Programs: Each week in FY10, 1,250 students of all ages, income levels, and musical abilities worked with the 59 teaching artists on the CCMS faculty, from toddlers in Music & Movement, to teenagers preparing for conservatory, to young people with autism writing original songs, to retirees beginning an instrument. More than 33,000 individuals in Laconia, Manchester, Concord, and other communities received 84,800 musical services through three program areas:

1) Sequential weekly lessons, ensembles and classes in Concord. Weekly instruction in Concord served 815 students in private lessons, ensembles and group classes, ranging from Music & Movement for pre-schoolers, to sequential wind, string, and jazz ensembles for youth ages 6-18 years, to the 120-voice Songweavers women's chorus. A nine-level sequential curriculum guides annual student evaluations and orients new faculty. Students ranged in age from 6 months to 99 years, and traveled from 107 towns in four states; they also performed in weekly workshops and more than 125 student concerts annually.

2) The Music in the Community Initiative (MICI). An additional 435 students per week were taught statewide through MICI, which takes CCMS faculty into public schools, human service agencies, and low-income preschools to provide free residency programs to many who would be unable to travel because of income, transportation, or disability. All MICI classes are taught by CCMS faculty members who are among its most experienced teachers. All MICI partnerships that involve weekly classes have a sequential curriculum in which students move from novice to more advanced levels. The classes intentionally do not require any additional expenses or outside resources for participants, such as instrument ownership, and all barriers to entry are removed. In addition to these year-long partnerships at 15 sites, weeklong residencies with organizations such as Camp Spaulding, as well as professional development workshops for teachers served partners in shorter-term but intensive educational programs. During FY10 (its 12th full year), MICI provided a total of 460 residencies, reaching 1300 individuals who received 8,600 educational services.

3) Public events and concerts throughout NH: In FY10, CCMS produced more than 200 public musical events, reaching 29,000 audience members with student and professional concerts in Concord and throughout New England. These range from the free Bach's Lunch series to folk, chamber music, and jazz concerts and the March Mandolin Festival to free master classes and workshops. Audiences include seniors, home-schooled children, mental health clients, music educators, CCMS families, and others.

Economic impact: The City of Concord's Creative Economy Plan cited CCMS as a leader in artist job creation and praised it for contributions to the regional economy and a vibrant downtown, including its role as the largest private employer of musicians in Maine, NH and Vermont, and its $3.5 million annual economic impact. Added to the daily influx of students, faculty and staff from northern New England, participants in weekend intensive workshops travel from as far away as Quebec and Oregon, and concert audience members at more than 200 annual public events include a diverse audience who come from across New England and beyond. Musical colleague organizations using the facility attract additional participants, expanding the thriving musical community on-site. All of this musical activity means that 2,500 people weekly (130,000 annually) visit downtown Concord because of CCMS, making CCMS a primary reason that the City has begun to define itself as an artistic center.

Artistic impact: Music School faculty members concertize internationally, are recognized as NH State Council for the Arts (NHSCA) roster artists, and have won fellowships from NHSCA and the NEA. Faculty are leaders statewide and nationally in the NH Music Teachers Association, National Association of Teachers of Singing, American String Teachers Association, Organization of American Kodaly Educators, and Early Childhood Music National Association. Music School alumni teach, record and perform nationwide, continuing their studies at such institutions as Interlochen, Juilliard, New England Conservatory, and Indiana University, and holding faculty positions at CCMS, UNH, Berklee College of Music, and NH public schools. CCMS students have performed with the National Honors Youth Orchestra, the National Youth Choir, the Greater Boston Youth Symphony and All-State and All-Eastern Festivals, among other prestigious ensembles.
