The organization received an unusual grant in 2010 in the amount of $611,269. The grant consisted of multiple donations from a variety of sources for the purpose of the organization collected by the donor prior to the organization being formed and receiving tax-exempt status. No charitable contributions were taken or receipts issued for the amounts collected for the start-up funds. Once the organization was formed, the donor contributed the previously collected cash and placed no restrictions on the use of the contribution. Because this contribution was received in the start-up year of the organization, the organization has no history of public support or programming activities. Further, the organization will continue to attract public support because solicitations continue to be made to a large group of potential donors and it is anticipated that donations will be received by them, as evidenced by the $500,761 in public support received in 2010. While the unusual grant caused this donor to become a substantial contributor, it is not anticipated that the donor will contribute in the future to the organization. Furthermore, the donor does not and will not have a position of control over the organization.
