including parents, young children, teenagers, and young adults in need of guidance and strong role models. About 40,000 individuals were served through the distribution of over 138,600 books. These books emphasize key areas of virtue and moral struggle including (1) to base one's life on service to others through work and ordinary activities, (2) promoting a positive view of the roles and importance of all persons, including the elderly, and the protection of all human life, and (3) the strengthening of family life as the primary way to improve the social, economic, and moral life of US society.

Scepter's criterion for selection of its works comes from Christian teachings of charity and service to others and the community. Certain publications are based on the charisma and writings of Saints and teachings of the Catholic Church in order to develop and distribute books that teach a positive approach to deepen and develop virtue and habits that improve the life of the family and the community.

During 2010 Scepter continued its rollout of works that help people with the development of human virtues such as generosity, charity, and fortitude in the face of difficult economic circumstances and family situations.

The success of our late 2009 release, "The Work of Children", which focuses on the virtues for the parenting of children, led to reprinting and continued sales of parenting titles by author James Stenson ("Upbringing", "Successful Fathers", "Peer Pressure", etc.) and the release of a series of short biographies about virtuous public and religious leaders, entitled "Cloud of Witnesses". A new book about living faith in the world appeared, entitled "Paths to God". Late in the year a very popular title came out, "The Virtues of Holiness" which makes the effort to struggle spiritually possible and achievable.

Scepter continued to market its Bible commentary, the Navarre Bible commentary, a uniquely readable way for people to understand how Scripture can lead them to more productive and happier lives, as well as the daily prayer book series "In Conversation with God". In addition, Scepter is making many of its books available as electronic books at very inexpensive prices in order to reach a greater number of young people. In 2010 Scepter began plans to step up its release of new titles to about 15-20 per year.

Scepter continued to provide free books upon written request from prisoners throughout the U.S. These books are intended to help them in their recovery and reentry into civil society upon completion of their sentences.
