4a (Code) (Expenses $ 356,275 including grants of $ 309,795) (Revenue $ 434,258)

Project Ixil-The lion's share of the organization's grants were made to Fundacion ixil, a Guatemala-based organization that works in the Ixil (pronounced EE-Sheel) region in Quiche (pronounced Kee-Chay) Guatemala The grants were for development projects that focus on Education, Health Care Food Security and Alternative Incomes Fundacion ixil was formed out a request from the local coffee cooperative, Asociacion Chajulense, to assist the coop in addressing social problems facing the region Education grants were directed toward scholarships for students to attend middle school, high school and the university (We will also support vocational scholarships for students who are either not candidates for higher education or who are unable to attend because they have to work to support their families However, this program will not start until the current fiscal year) One of our scholarship programs are specifically directed toward indigenous girls allowing them to attend middle school and high school This program is called Kukuy and comes along with the support of a mentor who acts as a tutor, an advocate for the girls in the school, and an advocate in the home because all too often they face alcoholism, and abuse in the home Part of that program teaches reproductive health to the young girls Health Care Projects focus on medicinal herbs and traditional medicine as there are few doctors in this region of Guatemala and unaffordable in any case Health care groups learn about different plants that can ease pain, act as antibiotics and cure sore throats, respiratory problems and a number of other ailments Food Security programs focus on teaching family and community gardens, raising chickens, and teaching about nutrition The region is mostly inhabited by coffee growers who, over the decades, have leaned more and more to cash cropping and less and less on producing their own food Today, most Guatemalans have lost their historical knowledge of agriculture and so a culture that used to provide its own food is now dependent upon purchases based on coffee sales, a very volatile commodity For most coffee farming families, there is enough food during theharvest, but shortly after, they all too often go hungry The Food Security Program was created to help the Ixil farmers recapture their ancient knowledge of agriculture and provide food for themselves The irony is that coffee farmers live on the richest lands in the world, but they don' have enough food to eat Alternative Incomes The Coffee Trust supports Fundacion ixil programs that provide opportunities for additional income for farmers, incomes that are not dependent upon coffee The coffee market is volatile to say the least At worst, it offers farmers the illusion of security, but no more Uneducated farmers are left at the mercy of the market So, we support Micro-credit programs for women, weaving projects for women, honey production for farmers whose land is ideally positioned for the very lucrative world honey market The Batzul Training Center We are also rehabilitating a dilapidated campus that we will use as a training center for all of out projects It will become a central location for training and we will also open it up to outsiders who want to visit the center and learn from what we have learned However, The Coffee Trust did not start funding this until FY 2011/12 Guatemalan Dream - A local restaurant has helped raised funds to support a scholarship program for students from Nueva Concepcion, Guatemala to attend Universidad de Valle de Guatemala (UVG) to finish their high school degree and go on to obtain a technical degree or full university degree There was a recent graduation on in Santa Lucia, Guatemala at UVG where 2 of the 5 students supported through the scholarship program received their technical degree and are now going on to obtain a full engineering degree (Continued - See attachment - Federal Supplemental Information)
