DONATION TO UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND BALTIMORE FOUNDATION FOR RESEARCH AT THE

MS CENTER

UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND
SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

Maryland Center for Multiple Sclerosis
Treatment and Research

The Maryland Center for MS, which was established almost 20 years ago, is recognized for the design and conduct of clinical trials in multiple sclerosis, comprehensive care of MS patients at all stages of their disease, and the conduct of basic research to better understand the pathogenesis of MS. The Center cares for one-third of the MS population in the state of Maryland and approximately 2,000 patient visits occur annually.

Care is provided in a new ambulatory center at the University of Maryland and in an active MS day program located at an affiliated rehabilitation facility, Kernan Hospital. Comprehensive care is provided; this includes diagnostic and second opinion consultation for ambulatory of patients, hospitalization for seriously ill patients, and rehabilitative care.

The clinical trials program has been very successful and the center is credited for playing a major role in the development of Betaseron and Glatiramer acetate for the treatment of MS. Several industry sponsored clinical trials and peer-reviewed, MS-related grants the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and the VA Research Service are active in order to specifically seek a better treatment and understanding of the pathogenesis of MS. NIH-funded research in the area of neurovirology is also underway as a part of the MS Center's research program

The Multiple Sclerosis program at the University of Maryland has been developed as a site for comprehensive care and innovative research into the cause and treatment of M.S. Patient care programs include interdisciplinary cooperation from the specialties of:

- Neurology, urology and neuroradiology
- Neuro-ophthalmology
- Neuropsychology
- Numerous social and community services

Neurologic rehabilitation, including a supervised exercise program, is also offered. The research focus of the center has been both in basic science, specifically neuroimmunology and neurovirology, and in controlled clinical trials. Recent clinical studies have focused on the immune effects of glatiramer acetate and the beta interferons, dalfampridine and other potassium channel blocking drugs, vitamin D and models of bone marrow transplantation for the treatment of MS, and the role of B cells and complement in the pathogenesis of the disease.

The Maryland Center for Multiple Sclerosis

Gifts to the Center

Voluntary contributions are critical to the future success and growth of the MS Center. While the majority of comprehensive care provided to people with MS is supported by insurance and other means, the extensive services provided at the Center are expensive, often exceeding the amount provided by insurance or fees. Also, the Center provides care regardless of ability to pay. We depend on voluntary support from interested citizens and grateful patients and their families to underwrite some of the cost of the care we provide.

The search for and development of better ways to control, treat and cure MS are at the heart of our mission. We have been uniquely successful in fulfilling this mission as the only Center worldwide to participate actively in the discovery and development of both beta interferon (Betaseron, Avonex) and glatiramer acetate (Copaxone) as the approved drugs to improve the long-term course of MS. The job is not yet done. While these drugs have opened a new era, they do not cure the disease and many MS persons will still have to live with serious fixed and increasing disabilities. Many avenues of research are open to us and many promising therapies need to be tested. The will and the scientific ability are available here. However, the funds to underwrite the effort often are lacking, especially when we need to test new rehabilitation techniques or ways to improve the quality of life for our patients.

Obtaining funds for medical research in the United States is competitive, with the process often requiring that we produce preliminary information that suggests that an expensive major project will be successful. Frequently, the critical ingredient is the preliminary research, which opens the door to whole new regions of research and discovery. The availability of unrestricted funds provided by voluntary contributions is vital to early research on new treatments required to further our mission of understanding MS and improving the lives of patients with the disease.

Management Contributions

All contributions are tax exempt and are placed in audited accounts of the University of Maryland Foundation. All funds are used exclusively to further comprehensive patient care and to support innovative research at the Center.

Restricted Contributions

While the Center's needs are most often best met with unrestricted funds, there are occasions when a donor may wish to provide funds for a specific purpose, such as underwriting special equipment, sponsorship of a research fellowship, partial support of nursing services or educational activities. Naming opportunities for major components of the Center are available. The Center director would be happy to discuss special interests with donors.
