Grantmaker's Description of How Grants are Used		The Organization maintains an internal control structure requiring thorough documentation of direct materials and labor as well as indirect expenses charged to its programs. Each potential award is analyzed for purpose and level of effort/budget required to reach the ultimate objective. Planning and budget is reviewed prior to beginning a project. Implementation is closely supervised. The project budget is managed. The project is continually evaluated throughout the process and at completion. Review of the completed project is analyzed for accomplishments made and opportunities learned for the next project. All is well documented.
