The purpose of the American Physiological Society is to promote the increase of physiological knowledge and its utilization. This is accomplished through the meetings and publications of the Society. The target audience for the services of the Society includes over 10,000 members as well as the large number of biomedical scientists interested in the physiological sciences who are not members of the Society.

If "Yes," describe these new services on Schedule O

If "Yes," describe these changes on Schedule O

4 Describe the organization's program service accomplishments for each of its three largest program services, as measured by expenses. Section 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) organizations and section 4947(a)(1) trusts are required to report the amount of grants and allocations to others, the total expenses, and revenue, if any, for each program service reported.

The American Physiological Society (Society) usually conducts three scientific meetings per year, one meeting that is held each spring in conjunction with several other scientific societies and two smaller scientific conferences. The spring meeting attracts between 12,000 and 15,000 scientists, which represent the target audience. Of those attending the meeting, between 3,000 and 4,000 scientists directly benefit from the scientific offerings of the Society. The two conferences attract approximately 500 scientists who represent the number of persons benefiting directly from the Society's symposia and workshops. The target audience for the conferences is between 15,000 and 25,000, representing members of the Society and the population of scientists interested in some aspect of the society's conferences. The Society publishes 13 scientific journals that serve as the vehicle for the dissemination of the investigator's research. The Society publishes more than 34,000 pages and receives over 7,400 manuscripts for publication. Each manuscript has an average of three authors, representing a population of 18,000 scientists who benefit from the society's publications. In addition, there are over 8,000 subscriptions to the 13 journals published by the Society. The majority of the subscribers are libraries providing a large target audience for the journals. Not only faculty, but also students and clinicians refer to the Society's journals providing for a potential target audience in excess of 100,000.
