The organization's principal objective is to bring to public like the devastating effects of sexual abuse on women. Through dissemination of knowledge to the public, the organization hopes to encourage those subjected to this abuse to seek help readily available. It also seeks to provide means to recovery for survivors of sexual abuse. These goals will be accomplished through the following means.

1. Presentations are developed to present to women's groups to about the local area. Within the presentations are testimonials by survivors from different backgrounds stages of recovery. Music and drama will also be employed to support the importance of public awareness of this problem. In addition to the presenters, therapist trained in sexual abuse issues will be available for dialogue with participants. Listings of the support groups and Christian therapist will be made available.
2. Sexual abuse support groups within the southern Indiana and Louisville, KY area will be formed. Several are already in existence. These groups will be led by survivors who have been through the recovery process and will be closely supervised by licensed Christian therapists. These groups will provide the survivors a place to find healing and a start to leading healthier lives. Groups will be offered on a weekly basis and will be of no charge to the participants.

3. Education: sexual abuse feeds off of the secrecy of not telling. The organization seeks to educate the public, particularly through the medical community that the guilt and shame of sexual abuse often manifests itself into physical ways. Hoping to prevent overlooking the possibility of abuse, the organization wants to get the warning signs of abuse into the hands of as many teachers and pediatric doctors offices as possible.
