4a (Code: 611600) (Expenses $ 245415 including grants of $ -0-) (Revenue $ 19171)

Ecovillage Training Center: In conjunction with the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR), Global Ecovillage Network and Gaia University, the Institute educates international students and transfers technologies through an immersion pedagogy of ecovillage living, classroom activity and hands-on skill-building exercises, together with workshops, lectures, practical demonstrations, publications, and outreach on six continents. In 2011 GVI provided 18 public lectures and 8 extended workshops, and produced numerous publications, including Green Living Journal and The Biochar Solution, and Grants and other forms of assistance are made to qualifying organizations approved by the Institute's staff and directors. To qualify, at a minimum, an organization would need to legally establish a non-profit registered charity and be approved by the local government, demonstrate fiscal responsibility, maintain an office with records, provide an agent specifically to represent the grantee to the grantor, and supply whatever records and proofs might be required by the Institute to measure progress and evaluate accomplishments. The staff of the Institute is typically very "hands-on" regarding projects outside the United States. The board provides expertise, makes site visits, recommends outside consultants, and performs frequent reviews.

It is the nature of the kind of trainings we perform that the number of actual recipients of the trainings is small. We train trainers.

In a given year we may instruct 20 or fewer trainers in each project. The number of people reached by these graduates and their work products is quite large, however. It is expected to exceed several thousand people per project, per year. In the case of the Mexican project in 2011, we likely reached more than 80,000 people whose lives were enhanced in matters regarding health, food security, and self-empowerment.
