Schedule A Part IV. Further Explanation

Facts and Circumstances for Public Charity

The organization despite the recent recession still receives over 21% of its support from the general public. The Organization under the facts and circumstances test is operated like a public charity as follows:

The organization has a weekly breakfast meeting in which a program is presented and general public is invited to attend. Funds are solicited from the general public at this weekly gathering. A weekly telephone bank of volunteers also solicits funds from the general public by weekly calls to recent attendees of the weekly meeting.

The organization's public support comes from the general public at large. The public support the organization receives is not concentrated within a particular family or group.

The organization is governed by a board that includes or has included in the past retired and active clergy, educators, and other people representing a broad cross section of community views and interests. This maintains strong ties to the public sector.

The organization maintains a definitive community program for the general public in the construction of handicapped access ramps. This service is made available to the general public as a public service by the organization.

The organization has plans to further expand their efforts to solicit funds from the general public in the future by increasing their telephone bank. They also have plans to expand their print advertising effort in order to obtain more funds by printing and distributing pamphlets to the general public about the organization's charitable goals and accomplishments. Other possible expansion would include advertising in the print media. The organization realizes that with the current economic conditions greater emphasis must be placed on obtaining funds from the general public.
