Each of these programs is determined by terms agreed upon by MCT and its donors. In general, MCT funds projects through a Call for Proposals process, inviting organizations and groups to submit Concept Papers describing the work they plan to undertake in the targeted areas. MCT-funded projects address biodiversity conservation and climate change adaptation issues in the FSM, RMI, ROP, Guam and CNMI, have a direct positive impact on the flora and/or fauna of the targeted ecosystem and related communities, show active involvement and commitment on the part of the communities involved, and show technical, financial, and organizational coherence to ensure the sustainability of the project. The Capacity-Building Program also coordinates its activities with those of the Conservation Program as the Conservation Program staff regularly monitor projects, providing on-the-spot assistance with project management as well as assessments of organizational needs in financial management. MIC is a peer learning initiative for established Micronesian leaders, emerging pioneers, and dedicated champions in conservation within both the non-profit and government sectors.
