Q1: The University Health Network (UHN) is comprised of four hospitals, Princess Margaret Hospital, Toronto General Hospital, Toronto
Western and Toronto Rehabilitation institute. UHN is related to: The Arthritis Research Foundation, The PMH Foundation, The TG &WH Foundation and Toronto Rehab Foundation.
Q2: Toronto is a very multicultural city and as a result the UHN has many programs and initiatives that are directed towards the varying different segments of Toronto's society. Toronto General and Western Hospitals provide 24 hour Emergency Room access.
Q3: At the UHN denial of treatment is not an option. Ideally, all patients would have Ontario Health Insurance Plan cards. This is not always the case and as a result, patient care sometimes is not reimbursed. The UHN is mainly funded by the Government of Ontario. As a government funded hospital, the UHN has a duty to provide services to all patients that require treatment. Whether or not the treatment occurs within the UHN depends on the diagnosis.
Q4: Toronto and its surrounding area is very large and very diverse. The unique needs of different sectors of the population along with the growing population provide a challenging set of circumstances.
Q5: The UHN employs a wide range of family doctors that service the local community and Toronto at large. The UHN, while striving to provide the best patient care also intends to keep a balanced budget. The UHN is working to meet the needs of Toronto's aging population by running specific programs that meet the needs of of this growing percentage of the population. Working in a metropolitan centre has unique concerns, so the UHN operates two different Detox centres, which provide men and women shelter and guidance.
The UHN works alongside National Eating Disorder of Canada helping people with eating disorders.
Q6: As the largest group of hospitals the UHN also has a large Research component attached to it. Whether provincially or privately funded UHN's research focus on all aspects of the human condition. The UHN is a leader in the green hospital movement.
