Briefly describe the organization's mission:

state parolees. Our assistance is generally limited to cases regarding conditions of confinement.

PRISON LAW OFFICE DOCKET

January 2013

Litigation¹

Plata v. Brown and Coleman v. Brown (Northern and Eastern Districts of California): In addition to regular monitoring described below, we made motions in both cases simultaneously to cap the prison population because the overcrowding was interfering with the ability to remedy the unconstitutional health care that the prisoners receive. The courts granted our motions to convene a three judge panel, and a trial was conducted in 2008. The legal issue is whether the overcrowding is causing the constitutional violations and whether a prison population cap is a necessary remedy. The primary beneficiaries are the class of prisoners with serious medical or mental health issues, and secondary beneficiaries are all state prisoners. In August 2009, the Court issued a ruling granting relief and announcing its intention to limit the state prison population to 137.5% of design capacity, which would result in a reduction of about 40,000 prisoners. The State appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, which affirmed the order on May 23, 2011. In response to the Court order, the state enacted Assembly Bill 109, which is designed to reduce the prison population. The State has recently made a motion to vacate the population cap, and we anticipate litigation in the coming months. (See monitoring section below for developments related to compliance with this order.)

Armstrong v. Schwarzenegger (federal district court): In this case the court issued injunctions requiring the prisons and the parole board to properly provide accommodations for prisoners with certain physical disabilities. Last year, the Court issued a number of rulings to enforce the original and subsequent injunctions, including orders about prisoners with disabilities in county jails and orders holding prison officials accountable for noncompliance by their employees. The State has appealed both rulings

Clark v. Schwarzenegger (federal district court): This case was settled in 1998 so that prisoners with developmental disabilities would be protected and accommodated. The state filed a motion to terminate the settlement, arguing that the prison conditions are lawful and therefore no injunction was necessary. The primary beneficiaries are the class of prisoners with developmental disabilities. The state moved to dissolve the settlement and a trial was held on that motion in ¹Since virtually all prisoners and juvenile wards are indigent, all of our work directly benefits indigents persons, whether they are named plaintiffs in the lawsuits or class members. Similarly, all of the statutory and constitutional violations alleged in these lawsuits disproportionately impact indigent persons.

May 2010. In 2011 the court ruled that there were still very serious problems with the care and treatment of prisoners with developmental disabilities and denied the state's motion to terminate the settlement. (See monitoring section below for developments related to compliance with this order.)

Mitchell v. Cate (Eastern District of California): This case concerns the CDCR's explicit practice of locking down prisoners on the basis of their race. The case is a class action suit filed on behalf of all prisoners who now or in the future will be subject to a lockdown on the basis of their race. The prisoners assert that this practice violates the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments and seek an injunction to end the practice. The Court granted our motion to amend the complaint and discovery has been in full swing. A trial is expected to take place in the fall of 2013.

Time: 381.40 Expenses: $3,098.88

In re Morales (California Court of Appeal): This case is similar to Mitchell v. Cate in that it challenges the policy of locking down prisoners on the basis of their race. This case is being litigated in state court and involves one prison, Pelican Bay State Prison. The legal issue is whether the CDCR's policy violates the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. The beneficiary of this litigation would be all prisoners who are locked down on the basis of race. The case was argued in January 2013 and a decision is expected within the next three months.

Time: 128.20; Expenses $219.44

Hall v. Mims (Eastern District of California): In this case, the prisoners assert that various conditions, including health care, in the Fresno County Jail are unconstitutional under the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendment. The case is filed on behalf of individual prisoners and the class of prisoners within the Fresno Jail. The prisoners seek injunctive relief to improve conditions in the jail. The court denied the county's motion to dismiss and discovery commenced. We have recently begun settlement talks with the County.

Time: 1253 ; Expenses: $8,491.66

In re Argueta (Marin County Superior Court): In this habeas corpus proceeding, the prisoner is challenging his confinement to the more restrictive part of death row. The State has recently filed a return and our reply is due in February. No time was generated in 2012.

Parsons v. Ryan (District of Arizona). This is a class action brought on behalf of all prisoners incarcerated in Arizona State Prisons under the Eighth Amendment's cruel and unusual punishment clause. One legal issue is whether prisoners are at a significant risk of harm due to inadequate medical, mental health and dental care. The other legal issue is whether the conditions in the isolation units are cruel and unusual punishment. The primary beneficiaries are the class of prisoners with serious medical or mental health issues, and secondary beneficiaries are all state prisoners. The court has denied the State's motion to dismiss the case, and argument on class certification will occur in late January 2013. Massive discovery is currently underway.

Time: 1955.13; Expense: $43,788.53

Riverside County Jail (Central District of California): This case will be filed in the next month, but we have undertaken an extensive investigation into the conditions in the Riverside County Jail and have sent the County a demand letter, but jail officials have refused to negotiate. The case will be filed as a class action and seek injunctive relief.

Time: 560.30; Expenses: $13,300.11

B. Monitoring²

Armstrong v. Wilson (United States District Court): This is the first system-wide and probably the biggest class action prison case in the country challenging discrimination against disabled prisoners under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). The class consists of all prisoners with disabilities related ²Much of the descriptions in the following cases have not changed from previous years. This is because in monitoring whether the prisons are complying with the remedial plans and/or injunctions that have been a product of litigation in previous years, nothing new, in the legal sense, has occurred. The remedial plans and/or injunctions were established several years ago, and, unfortunately, it takes prisons many years to change their operations to meet all the requirements of those detailed plans. The tours and other activities we conduct are designed to identify areas of non-compliance. We also work quite closely with special masters, appointed by the Court to oversee compliance in some of the cases. The tours occur generally every quarter, although the better functioning prisons are subject to tours as little as once per year. (The names of the staff attorneys responsible for conducting the tours is set forth under each case.) The tours on each case occur separately, so that several tours are conducted for the same prison. There are 33 prisons and 11 juvenile facilities that we monitor. After each tour we prepare a report which is sent to the prison, headquarters and the Attorney General's office and we work with the prisons and the state headquarters to resolve the problems we have identified. These areas vary from prison to prison, and indeed from unit to unit. We have previously submitted sample reports of various monitoring tours to provide some concrete examples of the types of issues that we are attempting to resolve. Unfortunately, due to the overcrowding of the state's prisons and the inability of the prison to come into compliance, many of the identified issues continue to persist. Therefore, unless a new discrete issue is noted in the text, much of the description of the case will be similar to the reported in previous years.

to hearing, learning, vision and mobility. This class is the beneficiary of our efforts. In 1996 we reached a settlement with the CDC which required the California Department of Corrections (CDC) develop and implement a plan to provide disabled prisoners with access to existing programs, services and activities. A remedial plan has been developed and has been filed with the Court. We currently are engaged in monitoring defendants' compliance with that plan.

In 2012, the State continued to make repairs and continued a systematic re-assessment of the structural accessibility of all prisons statewide. The parties are negotiating a system-wide plan to remove structural barriers. We are also advocating for a properly functioning administrative appeals system and videophones for deaf prisoners who sign. Monitors: Rebekah Evanson, Megan Hagler, Penny Godbold, Corene Kendrick. Time: 4166; Expenses: $41,982.17

Armstrong v. Davis (United States District Court/Ninth Circuit): This is the second part of the Armstrong case in which we challenged the parole board's compliance with the ADA. In December 1999 the court ruled in our favor, issuing a 111 page ruling and a 13 page comprehensive injunction against certain parole practices. The state appealed that injunction to the Ninth Circuit, which recently affirmed the judgment in a stinging opinion that was very critical of the state. See Armstrong v. Davis, 275 F.3d 849 (9th Cir. 2001). Last year the legislature passed laws that greatly reduced the number of parolees and revocation hearings. Our counsel, Rosen, Bien & Galvan, does most of the monitoring on this case. Megan Hagler from our staff does the rest of the monitoring of lifer and parole revocation cases.

Clark v. California (United States District Court): This federal class action lawsuit on behalf of mentally retarded prisoners alleged that the CDC was not complying with the ADA and was subjecting these prisoners to cruel and unusual punishment. In June 1998 the CDC settled the case, and in 1999 we agreed on a remedial plan to ensure that these prisoners were identified, had access to programs and were housed in safe environments. The beneficiaries of the remedial plan are disabled prisoners. There are about 1,300 such prisoners in the CDCR. Since the court issued its latest ruling, the parties have been working on a new remedial model that focuses on joint participation in support teams within the individual prisons and joint audits. The support team has been to several prisons and there have been several joint audits. In addition, the CDCR has taken steps to properly identify all the prisoners who have developmental disabilities. Time: 762.50; Expenses: $9,835.57

Coleman v. Wilson (United State District Court): This case is a class action on behalf of all prisoners with a serious mental illness. The class is the beneficiary of our actions in this case. The court held that the CDC's system for providing mental health care to prisoners violated the cruel and unusual punishment clause of the Eighth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. Since that time, plaintiffs' counsel and the Special Master have been monitoring compliance with a set of requirements contained in what is called the "Program Guides." In January 2013 the State made a motion to dismiss the case. Litigation on that issue is expected to continue through the spring of this year. Monitor: Steven Fama.

Time: 385.90; Expenses: $3731.24

Farrell v. Harper. (Alameda County Superior Court). This case was filed in the superior court of Alameda County and is a taxpayer action challenging the illegal use of funds in the CYA. The beneficiaries are all the youth in state custody. In essence, the legal issue is whether the state is providing a safe, humane and treatment oriented environment. In 2004, the court approved a Consent Decree. In 2009, the state stipulated to our motion to have the court experts take over the drafting of a significant policy called the Integrated Behavior Treatment Model. Unfortunately, the experts charged with developing the model failed to provide a useful report. In 2010, at our suggestion the state hired experts from the University of Cincinnati to develop a program, and that effort is scheduled to begin in February of this year. In 2012, that effort began to show results at two institutions. In addition, monitoring by the mental health expert is expected to begin in earnest this year, after a mental health audit instrument was agreed to by the parties. One institution still has problems with use of force and idleness. Monitors: Donald Specter, Sara Norman.

Hixon v. Hope (San Joaquin Superior Court): The legal issue is whether the conditions in the San Joaquin County Juvenile Hall violate state laws, including the prohibition against cruel or unusual punishment and various state juvenile hall regulations. The de facto beneficiaries include all the juveniles, present and future, who are detained in the hall, which includes over 100 youth at a time. In 2008, a Consent Decree was entered by the Court. During last year, we conducted two monitoring visits to the Hall. Improvements have been made to the point that no further formal monitoring is contemplated and the case has been dismissed. Monitor: Donald Specter. We have no time or expenses for this case in 2012

L.H. v. Schwarzeneger (United States District Court, Eastern District): This case was filed in 2006 to obtain constitutionally adequate procedures for juvenile parolees during their parole revocation proceedings. The beneficiaries are the class which includes all youth on parole from the Department of Juvenile Justice whose parole is revoked. The case is litigated primarily by our co-counsel, Rosen, Bien & Galvan. Corene Kendrick works with RBGG on this case.

Perez v. Cate. (Northern District of California). This case is a class action under the Eighth Amendment's cruel and unusual punishment clause. The claim is that the failure to provide adequate dental care violates the Eighth Amendment. The class consists of all prisoners who have serious dental problems, virtually all of whom are indigent and who will be the beneficiaries of our services. A Consent Decree was approved by the Court in 2006. In 2012, the case was dismissed with the exception of the provision requiring construction. Monitor: Alison Hardy.

Plata v. Davis (Northern District of California): The class in this case consists of all prisoners with serious medical needs. The beneficiaries of the case are the class. The primary benefit sought to the class is improved medical care. The primary work on this case consists of monitoring care in the individual prisons and working with the Receiver's office on new policies and procedures. Recently, the court issued an order directing the parties to plan for an end to the Receivership. This year the state is expected to move to dismiss the case, which will involve substantial litigation. Monitors: Steven Fama, Alison Hardy, Kelly Knapp, Rana Antawbi.

Porter v. Spears (Sacramento Co. Superior Court): This case concerns the conditions in a county juvenile hall in Sacramento and involves issues such as excessive use of force against youth and the failure to provide adequate educational services. The primary beneficiaries are the youth incarcerated in the hall. Last year we reached settlements to improve conditions and access to education with both defendants, the Sacramento County Probation Department and the Sacramento County Office of Education. The juvenile hall is now compliant with the terms of the decree and no further monitoring is contemplated. Monitors: Donald Specter and Kelly Knapp.

Valdivia v. California (Eastern District Court of California): The class consists of parolees who have been charged with violating their parole and are subject to parole revocation. The beneficiaries of the case are the class. The primary benefit sought by the case is fair procedures for parole revocation and alternative sanctions for the violation of parole. Most of the monitoring in this case is done by our co-counsel, Rosen, Bien & Galvan. Megan Hagler observes parole hearings to determine if there is compliance with the policies and procedures approved by the Court. Monitor: Megan Hagler.

Waters v. Titlon (San Francisco Superior Court): In 2006 we filed this case against the Correctional Standards Authority (CSA), the state agency responsible for inspecting the county juvenile halls to determine if the conditions are consistent with state regulations. The settlement includes an injunction requiring the agency to follow state law. The beneficiaries of this action are thousands of youth incarcerated in juvenile halls all over the state, who should experience conditions that are consistent with the state's regulations. A preliminary review of the CSA's actions to date reveal a much improved regulatory compliance process. After a review of many of the CSA's reports, a letter was sent requesting information and seeking corrections in procedures. A response was received and informal monitoring continues on a limited basis. We have not time or expenses in this case in 2012.
