Explanation: Our Treasurer was transitioned out of his position, our bookkeeping was outsourced to a third party who started a new set of books, and we moved our offices in the same timeframe. We didn't realize that the 2012 990 was not filed in a timely manner until late the following year. At this time, we engaged the services of a CPA to review the financials. This involved an extensive amount of work and adjustments to our Account Receivables, Inventory, Fixed Assets, and Net Assets. We were unable to complete the 2012 990 until this work was complete which didn't happen until March 2014. Further, the completion of this work was necessary before determining the starting balances of our new 2013 financials and a year end review. Once we finish this extensive review work through 2013, we will be able to maintain our financials and file our 990s in a timely manner. We have transitioned through a difficult time and demonstrated growth with strengthened financial stewardship and with increased implementation of best practices so that this will not happen again.
