Facts And Circumstances Test

Willard Cook, the Founding Editor of Epiphany a literary journal has served as the main financial supporter, Editor and business manager since its inception 10 years ago Editorial excellence has been the magazine's main priority, in order to establish the journal in the literary world This intense and necessary focus has, unfortunately, led to an admitted neglect of fundraising and outreach Consequently, Willard Cook resigned as Editor in 2013 with the goal of concentrating on the business side of operations and further outreach Willard Cook and the board are developing a strategic plan to raise the long-term fundraising goals from 22 to 33 percent We have currently submitted two 2013 grants to government arts agencies, which would help achieve us achieve the 33 percent goal We are an established publication with national distribution and a strong editorial reputation with over 2500 submissions per issue The magazine has achieved tremendous editorial success in the past few years, including several important prizes, recognition in The New York Times, inclusion in Best American Short Stories and Best American Nonrequired Reading, Pushcart Prizes, a PEN award for translation The magazine published three chapters of a memoir that led to its book form publication, which in turn became one of five finalists for the National Book Award in 2012 We have published over 200 writers and poets, including a Nobel Prize Winner, a National Book Award finalist, Pulitzer Prize winners, many bestselling writers, writers in translation, as well as emerging writers who are talented and deserve greater recognition The organization has a wide base of public support from reading events, social fundraisers and subscriptions, each of which must be carefully and thoughtfully solicited for money We have applied for and received several translation grants for individual works We understand, however, that our operations need to be more balanced to include greater outreach to our audiences We believe greater interaction with our community of writers and subscribers will lead to success of our long-term fundraising goals, and in turn establish Epiphany as an important journal in American Letters In short we are a journal that has established editorial excellence, but needs more time to meet the 33 percent goal
