Briefly describe the organization's mission:

Specific programs include consolidation of Las Baulas Parque Nacional in Costa Rica, protection of Leatherback sea turtles, research, education, and outreach.

The Leatherback Trust IRS Form 990 Statement No. 3

The Leatherback Trust (TLT) is a 501(c)3 not-for-profit corporation with offices in Haddonfield, NJ, San Jose, Costa Rica, and Playa Grande, Guanacaste, Costa Rica. Its mission is to protect the endangered leatherback turtle, other endangered sea turtles, and freshwater turtles from extinction through a variety of creative means.

TLT was instrumental in the consolidation of Las Baulas National Park on Playa Grande, Playa Ventanas and Playa Langosta, on the Pacific coast of Costa Rica which encompasses the primary nesting beaches for the leatherback turtle in the eastern Pacific Ocean. TLT participates in the acquisition of properties which are within the Park, in defending the integrity of the Park, and in stopping development and other activities which threaten the integrity of the Park and the survival of the leatherback turtle. TLT has developed a close working relationship with the Park Administration and the Natural Areas System (SINAC) of the Ministry of the Environment, Energy and Telecommunications (MINAET), in order to protect the turtles and their nests from illegal activities and to enforce Park Regulations. In the last year, signage notifying the public that it is entering a National Park has improved considerably.

Protecting the endangered leatherback is complicated and time-consuming. It involves carefully patrolling the most critical 3 miles of beach during the nesting season, which lasts from approximately October 1 through March 15. It involves measuring and tagging every nesting turtle, counting every egg laid, and removing to a guarded hatchery eggs from nests that are below the high water line on the beach. It involves guarding every hatchling from predators, on their way into the Pacific Ocean. It involves measuring the temperature of nests during the 60-65 days it takes the eggs to hatch, and making every effort to protect the nests from predators. It involves educating the Guanacaste community about the value of the nests, and the life cycle of the Pacific leatherback turtle, which has existed for over 100 million years.

TLT has worked with the citizens of Guanacaste to align their economic interests with the preservation of Las Baulas National Park and the leatherback turtle. TLT acquires significant goods and services locally, and conducts English language and other education efforts in local communities. TLT sponsors an Annual Sea Turtle Festival in the park with the neighboring community of Matapalo. As a result, poaching of eggs from nests within the Park has ended. Former poachers have become ecotourist guides, and TLT works closely with the guides to patrol the beaches and allow small groups of tourists to witness nesting sea turtles under tightly controlled conditions. TLT supports local pottery and other crafts throughout Guanacaste, funds research at several beaches outside of Playa Grande and Playa Ventanas, and works in numerous other ways to build strong educational, economic and other relationships with the citizens of Costa Rica. The TLT has developed a new program of research and conservation on Playa Cabuyal north of Playa Grande. It is an important green turtle nesting beach and hosts leatherback turtles as well.

In addition, TLT also supports other sea turtle conservation in Costa Rica and other countries. In Costa Rica TLT has supported research on olive ridley turtles at Playa Ostional, a famous "arribada beach" and on eastern Pacific green turtles on beaches near Playa Grande. Support derived from www.GreatTurtleRace.org, a web based conservation event allowed TLT to support leatherback conservation in Indonesia, in conjunction with partners there. TLT also supports conservation of loggerhead turtles in Greece.

In its efforts to protect and save freshwater turtles TLT has accepted a conservation easement on land in Chester County Pennsylvania that has habitat for the endangered bog turtle. It is now expanding its efforts in freshwater turtle conservation.

TLT supports first rate academic research by doctorate and other students from numerous universities, including Drexel University (PA), Purdue University (IN), Stanford University (CA), Cornell University (NY), Duke University (NC), Georgia Southern University (GA), Kalamazoo College (MI), and Monash University (AU). It maintains the Goldring-Gund Marine Biology Research Station at Playa Grande, which can house 24 researchers and volunteers safely, but in spartan conditions. Several doctorates have been awarded for research at Playa Grande and other nearby beaches, and others are in progress, on topics including: the effects of nest temperature on the sex of turtles; the interesting paths of leatherback and other sea turtles; and the foraging areas of leatherback and other sea turtles.

In order to protect an endangered species, it is useful to show its relationship to other species, threatened or not. Consequently, TNT has supported estuary research involving American crocodiles, and pelagic research involving the migration of billfish. The Goldring-Gund Station is open to students year round, so that high school and college students can conduct other research and learn conservation techniques involving other species when the leatherback turtle is not nesting.

The protection of endangered species requires community outreach, and the formation of coalitions with other organizations. To that end, TLT obtained a $289,000 UNESCO grant to purchase property near Goldring-Gund Station, that is partially within the Park. TLT has partnered with Conservation International and others to create, conduct and host "The Great Turtle Race" on the internet, which involves school children in leatherback turtle awareness and was featured in 2007 on The Colbert Report. Over 670,000 visitors viewed the site over 2.9 million times during 2007. Earthwatch Institute provides TLT with volunteers during the nesting season, to patrol the beaches under the direction of the doctoral candidates, protect the nests, obtain and tabulate necessary scientific data, and perform other essential work. TLT is attempting to create relationships with sports fishermen groups and others.

TLT is in the process of expanding its network of universities participating in its research activities, of high schools benefiting from its education activities, and of communities throughout Guanacasta and Costa Rica enjoying the advantages of ecotourism. TLT plans to construct a community center on the property UNESCO enabled it to purchase, at which tourists can gather in comfort to await the arrival of leatherback turtles late at night, educational programs can be conducted while they wait, and members of the local community can sell crafts and light refreshments. Matapolo lacks such a community center, so during the day it would be available as child care, education or meeting space to serve community needs. TNT also plans to construct a separate laboratory and research facility, so that students and other researchers can be better served.
