Participants become eligible to receive retirement benefits the first month on or the next following attainment of age 60 and completion of 5 years of vesting services from the date they become eligible participants of the Plan. The participant's benefit is equal to 2.0% of final average compensation multiplied by years of service (not in excess of 35 years), less 1.0% of the Social Security benefit multiplied by years of service (not in excess of 35 years). Pursuant to generally accepted accounting principles, management is required to determine the present value of the defined benefit plan liability, which considers various factors, including number of years until the participant's eligible retirement age, a discounted interest rate, and the expected return on plan assets. During 2012, because of current market conditions, the discounted interest rate decreased by 57 basis points, which caused the present value of the defined benefit plan's liability to increase. The impact of the increase in the present value of the defined benefit liability to an individual's deferred compensation is reflected in "retirement and other deferred compensation" in Schedule J, Part II, Column (c). The increase in the present value of the defined benefit plan's liability does not correspond to the actual benefit due to the Plan participants which is based on the compensation structure and years of experience, for which there was no significant changes during 2012.
