Grant Report: GlobalPost Afghanistan

Grant amount: $7,500

Grant purpose: Galloway Family Foundation awarded GlobalPost a grant to fund investigative reporting in Afghanistan.

Grant Awarded:

GlobalPost works to fill the enormous void that has grown up in coverage of the world by US news organizations. More than ever before in history, we need knowledge of other countries and of the global forces that are impacting our economy, our environment, and our very security. Every day, GlobalPost delivers written reports, video and photography that inform and entertain, taking people to far flung places around the globe most will never visit but where events are shaping all of our lives. The GlobalPost series, funded by the Foundation, accomplished the goal of informing and educating the public on the need for greater transparency in USAID funding in Afghanistan by producing published on-the-ground reporting and analysis with new information on how U.S. funds for development are too-often squandered and sometimes even up in payoffs to the Taliban.

The $7,500.00 grant was used for research, reporting writing and other work done by GlobalPost. The grant allowed GlobalPost to investigate the Kajaki Dam project in the Helmand Province of Afghanistan and how a $266 million project to build a dam for electricity has been stalled and failed to deliver much-needed energy in Helmand and Kandahar provinces. The grant funded reporting to put our reporter into this very dangerous and difficult terrain so we could tell the story from the ground. It also funded reporting in Kabul and in Washington, DC that enlightened on the tremendous waste of taxpayers' money. The project was titled "A Watershed of Waste: USAID and the Kajaki Dam."

The Galloway Family Foundation agreed to fund $7,500 for the project upon the signing the Grant Agreement. The project is completed and GlobalPost is waiting for the final payment.

Use of Grant Money:

The grant funded investigative reporting for a two-part series published on October 11 and 12. The project was reported and written by GlobalPost correspondent Jean MacKenzie and GlobalPost photographer/correspondent Ben Brody. GlobalPost Executive Editor Charles Sennott also contributed reporting from Kabul and Washington, DC. Sennott secured an exclusive interview with General David Petraeus in reporting this story which was also featured on the PBS NewsHour, further the overall reach of the project.

GlobalPost disbursed the grant money in the following fashion:

The articles produced by GlobalPost's MacKenzie, Brody and Sennott broke new ground in uncovering the many struggles that USAID is facing in carrying out development work amid an active insurgency. GlobalPost broke new ground in this report and becoming one of the first news organizations ever to get out to the Kajaki Dam and interview the Afghan officials who operate the facility and the military units that protect it. This on-the-ground reporting brought a new level of detail to the story of waste and corruption that is plaguing USAID in its mission in Afghanistan. The pieces brought a great deal of attention to the problems USAID is facing in Afghanistan and was read carefully by congressional committees and decision makers in USAID and at the highest levels of the US military. A senior USAID official described the series as "hard hitting, but fair." This impact on policy makers helped to fulfill the educational mission of the grant.
