Narrative Description of Organization's Programs and Activities

Part I: Our Purpose/Mission Statement

The specific purpose for which this corporation is organized is: to promote the use of ion mobility spectrometry (IMS) and ambient pressure gas phase ion-molecule chemistry as an analytical technique, provide opportunity for development through short courses on IMS theory and practice, provide opportunity for the free exchange of ideas and information on IMS through yearly conferences, poster sessions, vendor exhibits, and publications, and encourage the spirit of unity and cooperation among Society members to advance the Society's objective.

Part II. Program Activities

Brief History of the Society and Mission

In 1992, a conference supported by the US Army was held in Mesquite, NM to bring together investigators and researchers in ion mobility spectrometry (IMS), a element of military preparedness and aviation security in the detection of explosives, chemical warfare agents, and narcotics. Those in attendance were from government agencies, universities, and industry. We agreed to meet together the next year and these meetings became self-organizing annually under a participant-funded basis (costs of the conference were divided among participants). In some instances, the Society was aided in organizing the meeting by other Societies (Canadian Chemical Society) or by organizations of members (particular companies or government agencies in the US, Canada, UK and Germany). We would meet for several days to discuss research findings and exchange data. On August 21, 1996, this comparatively small group of scientists and engineers, with participation largely from the US, England, and Germany, filed as a Scholarly Society in Germany (papers with signatures for the declaration to organize and award of status in Germany are attached). The level of participation from those in the US suggested we should be reorganized officially in the US.

As a scholarly society with an all-volunteer structure, we continued with legal establishment in Germany until 2002 when our founding documents were revised to resemble the bylaws and constitution to be an unincorporated nonprofit in the United States
