Part IX-A Line 3	Summary of Direct Charitable Activities	Line 3 - The Getty Conservation Institute The Getty Conservation Institute (GCI) serves the conservation community through scientific research, education and training, model field projects, and the dissemination of the results of both its own work and the work of others in the field. The GCI focuses on the creation and delivery of knowledge that will benefit the professionals and organizations responsible for the conservation of the world's cultural heritage. Examples of the GCI's activities in North and Central America, Africa, Europe, and the Middle East are included below. In July 2012, the Getty Conservation Institute organized the workshop Cleaning of Acrylic Painted Surfaces (CAPS). This was the third CAPS workshop and aimed to introduce new cleaning products and systems for acrylic painted surfaces to the workshop's eighteen international participants. The Conservation Institute made available to educators didactic resources on earthen architecture conservation. These materials include a set of teaching guidelines originally developed by the GCI and its partners for the Pan-American courses on the Conservation and Management of Earthen Architectural and Archaeological Heritage. In October 2012, the GCI welcomed an international group of eighteen scientists and conservators to the Getty Center for a five-day workshop, "Recent Advances in Characterizing Asian Lacquers." The workshop explored new procedures for uncovering detailed information about lacquered objects, including providing tools and techniques for precise sampling of lacquers. This is the first in a series of workshops to be held at venues in the United States, Europe and Asia. Partnering with the City of Los Angeles, the Getty Conservation Institute conserved Amrica Tropical, the only U.S. public mural by famed Mexican artist David Alfaro Siqueiros still in its original location. The mural is once again accessible to the public and now features a mural viewing platform and an interpretive center which opened on L.A.'s historic Olvera Street on October 9, 2012, eighty years after Amrica Tropical was first unveiled. The Conservation Institute hosted a free symposium, "The Siqueiros Legacy: Challenges of Conserving the Artist's Monumental Murals" at the Getty Center on October 16 & 17, 2012. The symposium featured international speakers presenting different aspects of conservation, transportation, installation, and presentation associated with some of Siqueiros's most important murals in Mexico, Argentina, Chile, and Southern California. On November 15, 2012, the Conservation Institute hosted "Continuity and Change: Approaches to Conserving Modern Architecture Internationally." This event was free to the public and focused on the restoration and adaptive reuse of the iconic Modern Movement building ensemble, the Van Nelle Factory in Rotterdam. Guest speakers and architects addressed how conservation approaches can promote sound conservative decisions and practice for managing change in works of modern and postwar architecture. In November 2012, the Getty Conservation Institute and partners organized the second workshop of the preservation of photographic collections offered by the Middle East Photograph Preservation Initiative (MEPPI). The workshop included lectures and activities to present an overview of the current state of photographic preservation including best practices of storage and display, emergency preparedness and prioritization for preservation, best practices of digitization, and methods of raising public awareness. The GCI YouTube channel made available over 90 videos on a variety of GCI activities including GCI projects, lectures, symposia and conferences for conservation professionals around the world. To date, GCI videos have received over 25,000 views from around the world. In January 2013, The Conservation Institute organized with the Paintings Conservation Departments of the J. Paul Getty Museum an experts' meeting of conservators to discuss the ongoing study and treatment of Jackson Pollock's Mural (1943). Fifteen conservators from North America and Europe met to discuss structural conservation issues that will guide the work of the Getty team who will be treating the painting. As part of our long-standing collaboration with UCLA, the Conservation Institute co-hosted the Association of North American Graduate Programs in Conservation's (ANAGPIC) annual conference. Taking place at the Getty Center, Getty Villa and UCLA, this three-day event hosted over 150 graduate students in the field of conservation and included lectures, talks, and tours relating to the field of research and conservation. In April 2013, as part of the GCI's MOSAIKON Initiative, the GCI offered a training course in El Jem, Tunisia to twelve participants from North African countries including Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia and Libya. This six-week session was a part of a two-year course to train conservation technicians with a focus on the documentation of mosaics. The course covered topic including introduction to mosaics and their conservation, as well as intensive training in graphic documentation and recording. The GCI hosted two colleagues from the State Administration of Cultural Heritage (SACH). During their three month stay at the GCI, they undertook research relevant to the ongoing revision of the China Principles, investigating issues surrounding presentation and interpretation of heritage sites. The GCI hosted a symposium, "Minding the Gap: The Role of Historic Architecture in an Urban Environment", on May 21, 2013. This symposium was free to the public and explored the role of contemporary architecture in the historic urban environment. Five international architects and urban planners presented their own work, illustrating a range of approaches to this challenge. The symposium will conclude with an evening panel discussion moderated by architectural critic Paul Goldberger. The Getty Conservation Institute's Science department lead 33 tours of our facilities to conservation professionals or groups, local colleges and universities (including the CalTech, UC Irvine AMS Laboratory, Harvey Mudd College, USC's Architecture and Heritage Preservation Programs and Pasadena City College), local high school groups, and other professional organizations, including the American Chemical Society and the Aerospace corporation. The GCI hosted five conservation guest scholars who conducted their own research on topics ranging from investigating new methods and processes in the salvage of heritage collections in earthquake zones to examining the inspiration of the architect of the Glasgow School of Art. In June, the GCI and its partner, World Monuments Fund (WMF), hosted an open-source community workshop in England in connection with Arches, a GCI-WMF developed system designed to help inventory and manage cultural heritage. Twenty heritage professionals from government agencies and academic institutions in Britain and Europe worked with the project team to provide feedback in advance of release of version 1.0 of the system, planned for September 2013. The GCI hosted a postdoctoral fellow in the Science department working with the GCI's Museum Lighting group studying the activation spectra and reciprocity of selected colorants and assisting with research being carried out on LED lighting, microfading research, and other topics focused on preventive conservation. Two issues of Conservation Perspectives, The GCI Newsletter were distributed free of charge around the world to over 8,000 international professionals in conservation and related fields and members of the public concerned about conservation. The GCI Bulletin, a free bimonthly e-bulletin providing up-to-date information on the activities of the Getty Conservation Institute, was distributed free of charge to professional colleagues around the world. The GCI's comprehensive database of abstracts and key resource for the conservation field, AATA Online added over 3,600 new abstracts related to preservation and conservation of materials cultural heritage. Additionally, nearly 9,000 citations were incorporated to a search interface to the GCI Project Bibliographies, enhancing and improving browsing and search features. In addition to hundreds of online publications, seven additional GCI publications were made available free of charge on the Getty Web site during this time period. Between Two Earthquakes: The Management of Cultural Property in Seismic Zones - English version, Conserving Twentieth-Century Built Heritage, A Bibliography, Monitoring Gaseous Pollutants in Museum Environments, David Alfaro Siqueiros: Murals in Los Angeles, Damage Assessment of Historic Earthen Buildings After the August 15, 2007 Pisco, Peru Earthquake, Effects of Light on Materials in Collections, The Atlas of Analytical Signatures of Photographic Processes.
