	Shelburne Farms is a learning center based at our 1,400 acre working farm and forest and National Historic Landmark. The Farm offers educational experiences and resources for educators, schools, children and families that connect people with nature and agriculture and inspire stewardship in their home communities. Shelburne Farms also collaborates extensively with other regional, national and international organizations to advance Education for Sustainability and serves as a catalyst and convener for strengthening local food, forestry and energy systems. In 2013 Shelburne Farms completed its 41st year and served over 156,000 program participants and visitors. This number was about 7,000 more than 2012 mostly due to an increase in youth and family programs, visitors to the Children's Farmyard, and in community events, including the Farm's 35th annual Harvest Festival, the 25th anniversary celebration of the Vermont Housing and Conservation Board and the 5th annual Vermont Cheesemakers Festival. Ongoing program outreach initiatives include Farm to School and food systems education, the Farm-Based Education Network, and regional and international Education for Sustainability learning communities. A highlight of the year was publishing Cultivating Joy and Wonder: Educating for Sustainability in Early Childhood through Nature, Food, and Community. The book's activities, essays, and resources reflect the Farm's years of experience in early childhood and sustainability education, both on-site and with partners at the Sustainability Academy and King Street Center in Burlington. Through our partnership with the Burlington School District and Head Start we are supporting a preschool classroom at the Sustainability Academy at Lawrence Barnes School. The preschool extends the programming at the Academy, with a focus on school-readiness, literacy, food, nutrition and the natural world. The Sustainability Academy is the first elementary magnet school with a sustainability theme in the country. Shelburne Farms, NOFA-VT and other VT FEED (Food Education Every Day) collaborators are partners in the Vermont Community Foundation's Local Food for Healthy Communities initiative, helping bring local, healthy foods to Vermont school children. Two thirds of Vermont's 320 elementary schools are now engaged in Farm to School programming, connecting students, local farms and communities to serve healthy meals in school cafeterias. On the Farm, special grants made possible continuing improvements at the market garden and dairy, and a second year of a University of Vermont field trial investigating whether organic soil amendments can improve soil health and support more nutrient-dense forage production as way to reduce grain feeding. Significant campus improvements included the purchase of a neighboring home for additional faculty housing and continuing restoration of the Shelburne House formal gardens. The Farm also received special support to host a Traditional Foods Symposium that explored connections between food and health.
