job evaluation. Jobs are evaluated using data obtained from job descriptions prepared by the position's supervisors and the job incumbent (if the position is already filled) or the Board. The resulting job sizing structure provides an internal hierarchy of jobs based on the content. Using job sizes and and market salary information, the VP of Human Resources will establish salary levels and median salaries for each range. The supervisor may then determine the employee's salary within the prescribed range based on the employee's qualifications and budget restraints.
