The Third Wave Foundation was founded 15 years ago to fill a resource and strategy gap at the intersections of philanthropy, youth organizing, feminism, and racial justice. Third Wave centers the youth most impacted by inequity as the architects for community and systemic change, through strategic grantmaking, leadership development, and philanthropic advocacy. We support multi-issue and multi-strategy work led by young women and transgender youth of color in low-income communities. Over the past year, our $25,000 grant from the Catalyst Fund invigorated our individual donor base, has ensured a robust grant docket for 2013, and enabled us to successfully complete a strategic planning process. We are excited to present this review of our accomplishments during an exciting period of growth and change for Third Wave. Update on Strategic Planning Since its founding, Third Wave has helped dozens of emerging organizations build and sustain effective models for achieving social impact. In 2012 we reached our 15th anniversary and, looking to the future, leveraged many of the lessons we learned through work with our grant partners towards a critical analysis of our own sustainability. As a result of this process, we identified a strong opportunity for Third Wave to simplify its structure, reduce overhead, and channel a higher percentage of assets to youth leadership development. Between March and June, board members met with Third Wave's founders and stakeholders (including former staff, grantee partners, and other experts in the field) to discuss the future of the organization. These meetings affirmed that Third Wave has a unique and important role in supporting youth-led feminists across the country, particularly young women of color and transgender youth. Third Wave embarked on a rigorous process to source and evaluate potential partnerships based on long-term sustainability, financial strength, shared vision, potential for impact, and ability to preserve Third Wave's legacy. Over the past 15 years, Third Wave has developed strong relationships with institutional funders, philanthropist networks, and young leaders in the field. The dynamism of these relationships was demonstrated in the strength and diversity of the proposals submitted to Third Wave. In January 2014, the Board of Directors finalized a partnership agreement with the Proteus Fund. Proteus advances the goals of its partners by providing strategy development, research and fund management. Moving under the Proteus umbrella provides us with a unique opportunity to determine how Third Wave can most effectively bridge existing gaps and leverage untapped opportunities in the feminist youth movement. Just as we have facilitated relationships between Third Wave grant recipients in the past, as a Proteus partner we will be poised to learn from the experiences of other Proteus foundations focused on issues such as structural racism, racial injustice, marriage equality, and policy change more broadly. Fundraising and Visibility In 2013, Third Wave raised $25,000 from individual donors as a part of our external relations strategy. This success is indicative not only of the unique role that Third Wave plays in the philanthropic landscape but also of grassroots support for our strategic path forward. Over the past year, our fundraising work centered around the following activities: The creative adoption of social media trends in order to drive online fundraising and supporter engagement; Crafting messaging and graphic materials that effectively told the Third Wave story and articulated the impact of our grant partners; A written year-end appeal to both grassroots and major donors; Personalized and targeted outreach by staff and the board to major donors; and 100% giving from the Board of Directors. The announcement of our new partnership with the Proteus Fund gave Third Wave supporters cause to reinvest in the organization as well as Third Wave opportunities to increase our visibility in the field. For example, early in 2014 we intend to publicly release Third Wave's historic archives, including the Gender Justice Report. These resources capture a unique moment of transition and intersectionality in U.S. feminist history. The archives will be housed at Duke University. Third Wave has always been and will remain a by and for organization. Over the next year we will convene youth leaders from around the country to identify opportunities to build alliances, connect local, national, and international feminisms, and bring gender justice and trans-inclusivity conversations to new audiences. Third Wave has led the development of a gender justice framework for progressive funders and social justice activists and we are committed to advancing this work in the years ahead.
