What is the organization's primary exempt purpose?
Epiphany publishes fiction, nonfiction and poetry of both established and emerging writers whose work might not find validation in commercial or academic markets. Epiphany is an independent literary journal that supports and honors the work and determination of creative writers by establishing various publishing outlets for their work including a bi-annual hard bound journal, chapbooks, and various electronic publishing initiatives.

Describe the organization's program service accomplishments for each of its three largest program services, as measured by expenses. In a clear and concise manner, describe the services provided, the number of persons benefited, and other relevant information for each program title.

28 Epiphany is committed to publishing literary work in which form is as valued as content. We look for writing, wherever it may fall on the spectrum from experimental to traditional, that is thoroughly realized not only in its vision but also in its commitment to artistry. We are especially open to writers whose explorations of new territory may not yet have found validation elsewhere. The journal had tremendous success with a recent war issue that was guest edited by the renowned poet and veteran Brian Turner. The issue has been used in three different veterans writing workshops: the Joiner Institute for veterans in Boston, New York University Veterans Writing Workshop and the 14th street Y workshop. In addition the issue was used by Elizabeth Irwin High School in a class on war. We have also increased our audience by doing chapbook contests with Best Selling writers Darin Strauss and Kimiko Hahn.

Facts And Circumstances Test

Willard Cook, the Founding Editor of Epiphany, a literary journal, has served as the main financial supporter, Editor and business manager since its inception 11 years ago. Editorial excellence has been the magazine's main priority. In order to establish the journal in the literary world, this intense and necessary focus has, unfortunately, led to an admitted neglect of fundraising and outreach. Consequently, Willard Cook resigned as Editor in 2013 with the goal of concentrating on the business side of operations and further outreach. Willard Cook and the board are developing a strategic plan to raise the long-term fundraising goals from 22 to 33 percent. We continue to request grants from government arts agencies, which would help us achieve the 33 percent goal. We are an established publication with national distribution and a strong editorial reputation with over 2500 submissions per issue. The magazine has achieved tremendous editorial success in the past few years, including several important prizes, recognition in The New York Times, inclusion in Best American Short Stories and Best American Nonrequired Reading, Pushcart Prizes, and a PEN award for translation. The magazine published three chapters of a memoir that led to its book form publication, which in turn became one of five finalists for the National Book Award in 2012. We have published over 200 writers and poets, including a Nobel Prize winner, a National Book Award finalist, Pulitzer Prize winners, many bestselling writers, writers in translation, as well as emerging writers who are talented and deserve greater recognition. The organization has a wide base of public support from reading events, social fundraisers and subscriptions, each of which must be carefully and thoughtfully solicited for money. We have applied for and received several translation grants for individual works. We understand, however, that our operations need to be more balanced to include greater outreach to our audiences. We believe great interaction with our community of writers and subscribers will lead to success of our long-term fundraising goals, and in turn establish Epiphany as an important journal in American Letters. In short we are a journal that has established editorial excellence, but needs more time to meet the 33% percent goal.
