In either case and prior to making any grants, the organization performs extensive due diligence on both its domestic partners as well as the foreign organizations where the funds will ultimately be directed. For domestic partners, this diligence involves review of their standing and reputation within the charitable community, meeting with management and officer of the partner organizations, receiving financial indications of the transfer of funds to foreign organizations, and receiving photographic and other visual evidence of the delivery of school uniforms to children at the foreign organizations and schools. For direct grants to foreign organizations, the organization generally works with a US based contact for the sponsoring school and performs requisite diligence on the individuals running the schools including holding discussion and conversations with them as needed. Receipt of financial indications of the transfer of funds as well as receipt of photographic and other visual evidence is also provided.
