Support of AIA NM Architects: Biennial Design and Honor Awards. AIA NM members submitted 33 projects for design awards and 7 were chosen by a jury of architects from the western mountain region to receive awards for exception design work. Two Honor Awards, the NM Architects Medal for dedication to the service to architects and the profession, and the Silver Medal for Lifetime Achievement were both awarded to AIA NM members. The Design and Honor Awards were presented at a banquet during the AIA NM Biennial Convention in Sept. 2014. The event and awards were extensively reported in the press as part of AIA NM's ongoing effort to promote the benefits of architects and architecture to the general public.

990-EZ Part III, Line 29

Support of New Architects and Emerging Professionals. AIA NM supported Associates (interns) with study groups and other learning activities, including a three-day training seminar for associate architects studying for the ARE (certification exams). The YAF - emerging professional architects practicing for under 10 years - carried out an active mentorship program at the UNM School of Architecture + Planning, and were themselves mentored by senior architect members of AIA NM> There were several social and educational programs presented during the year for and by Young Architects and Associate Architects of AIA NM.

Government Advocacy. In 2013, AIA NM advocated for the passage of a bill in the state legislature to require QBS (qualification-based selection) for architects, surveyors and engineers in contracts by all municipalities in the state. It failed in the senate, but raised significant awareness of the need for and value of QBS in procurement. A representative of AIA NM continued to serve on the Governor's Procurement Taskforce to speak for the interest of architects in the state procurement process. AIA NM also continued to lobby New Mexico legislators in Washington on matters of importance to architects and the profession of architecture, including such issues as energy efficiency tax credits, easing the tax burden on small businesses, and increased availability of financial credit for commercial building projects by community banks.
