Briefly describe the organization’s mission

Fresno Metro Ministry's mission is learning, connecting and engaging to achieve healthy people and healthy places. Our current programs focus on Healthy Food Access, Healthy Environment and Health Care Access. With a 43-year history of community action, we work with residents to advocate for positive change in community and institutional systems and policies. We currently work directly with over 250 families with at least 500 children, and we annually reach more than 10,000 individuals through our programs and initiatives. Our community engagement projects that work with families include Latinos United for Clean Air (LUCA) and our three Community Gardens in partnership with the City of Fresno PARCS department, and our community education around CalFresh and Covered California. Our LUCA work entails resident leadership development so that parents may advocate for a healthier environment and support improved air quality in the Valley for their children. Our community gardens help provi

Our environmental health program has focused on land use planning at the local and county level in order to reduce air pollution and greenhouse gases from future urban growth. Our engagement in the Fresno County Sustainable Community Strategy development process (which is part of the Regional Transportation Plan process) has created a platform to engage many elected officials in the debate about smart growth vs. sprawl and the future health of our region. FMM staff have met directly with 5 mayors involved in the decision-making process, along with numerous other opinion leaders such as city managers, city council members, city planners, and Council of Government staff. We have also continued our leadership at the City level on the General Plan update, and have engaged in a debate about the role of agriculture in our city limits. FMM staff has served as the experts on pesticide exposure, organic agriculture and best practices for community gardens and urban agriculture in this debate. We worked to build community support for a Bus Rapid Transit system that is necessary to accomplishing the General Plan update's infill goals. Many residents supported it after years of learning about and engaging in the City's 2035 General Plan update and the Downtown Neighborhoods planning process with Fresno Metro Ministry and other CBOs. We have played a major role in an intentional and much needed effort to include the more diverse populations in our city in the planning processes through a collaborative called Fresno Leaders Advocating for Regional Equity (FLARE) Together. These are residents who primarily live in South Fresno and many speak languages other than English such as Spanish, Hmong, Laotian and Mixteco. They have been participating in a campaign called Building Healthy Communities (BHC), focused on investing and supporting existing neighborhoods in the City. In addition, FMM has been the Fresno County lead for Central Valley Air Quality Coalition efforts to take the issue of air pollution to the local level, and have presented to both the City Council and Board of Supervisors about air pollution health impacts and environmental justice screening tools.

Fresno Metro Ministry's hunger and nutrition work in 2013 expanded further into local food systems work. Our involvement in community gardens is still as active as ever, and we continue to believe that community gardens are assets to neighborhoods and those involved. As we continue to work on issues of hunger and food access, we find ourselves engaging a much wider group of individuals and organizations and looking at a variety of ways to address this crisis. FMM engages the three community gardens that we manage for many purposes. First and foremost the gardens are locations for people to grow food for their families, but the gardens are also used to promote community gardening, highlight the productivity of such spaces as a part of a strong local food system, and educate the general public about the benefits and methods of gardening. This past year, we did 17 tours of our community gardens. FMM has also continued doing consultations with potential community gardens. Ten consultations were done this year, ranging from a variety of churches, the Fresno Grizzlies, Fresno Unified School District, and a variety of organizations. We have seen a great increase in the number of community gardens over the last four years of doing this work, and we now have documentation of at least 18 community gardens throughout Fresno. Fresno Metro Ministry continues to offer gardening education to community gardeners and the general public. The majority of classes are focused on composting, soil management, water conservation, organic pest control methods, and planting schedules. We were able to conduct a total of 18 gardening seminars in 2013. This past year also saw us reaching out to educate the general public about food insecurity in our area. FMM also partnered with Participant Media to host a series of screenings of the film, A Place at the Table. This film is a documentary focusing on hunger in the United States. We were able to do a series of small screenings targeting youth, organizations, and educators, as well as holding three public screenings at CSU Fresno, Grizzlies Ball Park, and the UU Church. The screenings were accompanied with TV, radio, and print media, and reached approximately 300 people. FMM's hunger work has provided us with the opportunity reinforce already existing relationships as well as create new relationships through alliance work. We recognize that to effectively address the issue of hunger and food access, we must do more than increase donations and build community gardens. Those are a part of the solution, but to make a bigger impact, the current food system must be altered. FMM is now a part of the Fresno County Food System Alliance, whose members include people from advocacy organizations, farmers, federal agencies, state agencies, county agencies, business, and health advocates. We also continue to coordinate the CalFresh Task Force for Fresno County and educate our community residents about the benefits offered by CalFresh and how to access them.

Since June 2013, Fresno Metro Ministry has gathered dozens of Fresno County stakeholders monthly to chart the course of implementing the Affordable Care Act ("Obamacare") in Fresno County. The monthly convenings have provided the opportunity to discuss important topics such as the challenges of outreach and enrollment to the uninsured, guaranteeing that there are sufficient providers to meet the increasing demands for care and ensuring that the new mental health benefits are implemented in a timely manner. The stakeholder group is also focusing on those who will remain uninsured even after the implementation of the Affordable Care Act. Front and center in this discussion is the future of the County's Medically Indigent Services Program (MISP), which serves the uninsured. The County sought court permission to be relieved of an injunction that has required them to provide health care services for medically indigent people including undocumented Fresno County residents since 1984. Many of MISP's over 19,000 enrollees are now eligible for Medi-Cal under the ACA expansion and no longer need MISP. However, it's been a challenge to get these new eligibles enrolled in Medi-Cal and continue to receive the services and medications they need. In addition, undocumented residents are not eligible under the Affordable Care Act, and would be left without any health care options without MISP. In the face of evolving federal and state regulations and procedures, the Fresno County stakeholders are attempting to develop local solutions that include many community-based organizations and community voices. At the same time, Metro's Outreach team with many volunteers have been leading efforts to get the information about Covered California and expanded Medi-Cal out in the community. Over the past seven months, we have attended over 60 events to provide nearly 2,500 educational sessions and reached out to nearly 6,000 individuals in Fresno County. All of these conversations are crucial in a time of major change in our health care system.
