GSMA Connected Women Programme Aims to increase womens access to and use of mobile phones and life-enhancing mobile services in developing markets GSMA Connected Women Programme's objectives are to Encourage industry to serve resource-poor women, Increase availability of life-enhancing value-added services, Promote solutions to womens barriers to usage The programme aims to achieve these objectives by working with mobile operators, value-added service providers, and other mobile industry members, as well as non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and other international development partners

4c

(Code) (Expenses $ 2,569,591 including grants of $ 1,612,646) (Revenue $)

M4D Utilities In 2013, there remain 1.3 billion people without access to "improved" water resources As demand grows in urban centres, emerging markets face significant obstacles channeling future investment to rural and peri-urban communities where the challenges of delivering basic water and energy services are numerous The GSMA sees an opportunity for the mobile industry to help solve these challenges in emerging markets How? As mobile connectivity extends beyond the reach of the electricity grid and central water utilities more people now have access to the mobile network than to energy and water Globally, it is estimated that 411 million people have access to the mobile network before they have access to energy and 165 million people have access to the mobile network before they have access to an "improved" water source
