Form 990-PF - Part IX-A

1) Tiger Foundation hires outside consulting firms to provide technical assistance to the Foundation's grantee organizations. The technical assistance grants enable the consulting firms that have expertise in particular areas (e.g. Nonprofit financial management, board development etc.) to provide assistance to these grantee organizations through one-on-one coaching, sponsored seminars, and training programs. As a result of this technical assistance, the grantee organizations will be better able to serve their communities. Total Grantee-related technical assistance grants were $720,892.

2) Tiger Foundation staff spends approximately 10% of their time, or $148,248 supporting the grantees' staff and purpose by:

- Serving on various affinity groups and committees to advance the work of grantees
- Providing technical assistance and advice to accomplish the grantees charitable purpose

Please refer to the website for the most accurate and up to date review of funding guidelines. Only organizations in NYC and who meet our grant guidelines which are as follows:

Across all program areas, we seek comprehensive, long-term, preventive programs. Programs providing one-time services and short-term interventions are not likely to receive funding. We seek organizations with skilled management as well as committed board members who contribute financially in addition to giving their time. Programs must have clearly defined, measurable goals and objectives, realistic implementation strategies, and comprehensive outcomes tracking and reporting mechanisms. Applicants are also evaluated on their cost-effectiveness, replicability, and ability to attract funding from other public and private sources.

Within all four program areas, the Foundation seeks funding opportunities that leverage the substantial investment of the public sector and other funders, that are replicable/scalable to achieve maximum impact, and that produce specific, objective, and measurable outcomes documenting their efficacy.

Applicants must be exempt from income taxes under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. Requests for support are not considered for individuals, annual or capital campaigns, endowments, benefits, public policy or lobbying groups, legal aid, existing obligations or debt liability.

The Tiger Foundation provides grants typically ranging in size from $75,000 to $500,000. While we do consider grant renewal requests, all grants represent a one-time commitment.

EDUCATION

For decades, the New York City public school system has struggled to provide low-income students with educational opportunities sufficient to prepare them for success in college and beyond. Those born into poor families, and into communities lacking resources and educational options, are often left behind. With high school graduation rates hovering between 50%-60% (lower for boys and students of color) Tiger Foundation is committed to improving the public school system and to providing high-quality K-12 education options and opportunities to students. We seek to do this in the following ways:

- Supporting whole-school models that provide a high-quality education and ultimately serve as examples of effective schools and strategies that can be adopted across the New York City school system (e.g., charter schools and public school intermediary organizations).
- Since systemic change takes time, we also fund a limited number of academic enrichment programs and alternatives to public schools to support students in need of services beyond what their schools can provide and ensure they meet success at every stage of development.
- Supporting key school-level levers that enhance the education experience (e.g., leadership and teacher development).

Across the portfolio, programs must document concrete outcomes. We consider the following areas when assessing program success:

- Student performance metrics: improved academic performance as measured by formal and informal assessments
- School-wide performance metrics: attendance rates, effective curriculum and effective teacher performance management systems, parent engagement, on-time grade promotion, student and staff/teacher retention, and demonstrated commitment to working with other schools/reform agents

Model Schools / Systemic Reform

The Education Committee has reviewed and funded a variety of systemic reform initiatives, including intermediaries, model schools, professional development programs, and other programs designed to introduce an element of competition to the school system. The Committee remains confident that such competition can serve as a means to achieve school reform.

New York State passed a strong charter school law in 1998, allowing approved schools great latitude in staffing, budgeting, curriculum, etc. The Committee continues to examine the issue of how best to support these schools and the broader charter school movement. We believe that charter schools are an excellent vehicle for public school reform and we will continue to seek opportunities to partner with both high-quality charter management organizations and talented charter leaders running stand-alone, non-networked schools.

Our objective here is (i) to demonstrate how schools may offer a high quality education to highly at-risk students within the financial restraints of the existing system, (ii) to publicize the successes of these schools as shining examples of how the public school system can do a better job, and (iii) to create model programs which can be replicated system-wide and which can access public funds as autonomous charter schools.

Academic Enrichment

The Education Committee funds some enrichment programs offered by community-based organizations. Some are linked more closely to the school day than others; some are located on site at public schools. We do not support pure summer interventions or school-day curricular enhancements. All of the programs must document concrete academic outcomes showing improved student performance.

EMPLOYMENT

Forty percent of families living in poverty have a working head of household and twenty percent have at least one full-time worker. The costs of achieving economic self-sufficiency in New York City are such that holding a steady job does not guarantee economic independence. Low-income New Yorkers need good jobs that pay better than the state minimum wage and provide opportunities for earnings growth and career advancement. By supporting a variety of job training programs with a strong focus not just on placement in jobs but on the supports needed for long-term job retention and career advancement, Tiger seeks to provide opportunities for adults and youth with high barriers to employment, including those:

- With limited education
- With histories of substance abuse, homelessness, and incarceration
- Possessing limited work experience
- Transitioning off of public assistance

Our workforce funding focuses both on the unemployed and the underemployed (including programs which support adults and out-of-school youth) and seeks to leverage and improve on the city's and state's sizeable investments in improving employment opportunities.

Training Programs

The Employment Committee funds a wide variety of organizations serving the full spectrum of clients, from those with the highest barriers to employment to dislocated workers. The portfolio includes both out-of-school youth and adult programs. While clients served must be low-income or welfare-dependent, the committee in recent years also has been supporting a number of career-ladder and wage progression programs to help already engaged low-wage workers improve their earning opportunities on the path to economic self-sufficiency.

The Committee has identified several program models that are successful in promoting long-term economic self-sufficiency. Some take the immediate-employment approach, some focus on training; some are industry-specific, with strong ties to employers, while others provide general job-readiness skills. However, all funded program models have three key things in common: a focus on job placement (not merely training or job readiness); a mandatory tracking and follow-up component for at least one year; and formal outcomes measurement meeting minimum performance thresholds. In organizations serving disconnected youth, we are particularly interested in those programs producing multiple positive outcomes (e.g., completion of the HSE, placement in a full-time job, placement in a part-time job, and college enrollment).

YOUTH AND FAMILIES

Tiger Foundation's investments in support of Youth and Families are dedicated to comprehensive, long-term approaches to breaking the cycle of poverty. In this funding portfolio, we focus on three critical areas:

- Intervening at a critical time for very young children, aged birth to five years, who are born into high-risk environments
- Providing opportunities for vulnerable youth by supporting in-school and out-of-school program interventions
- Supporting fragile families in their efforts to maintain self-sufficiency and keep families intact

Early Childhood

Nearly half of low-income children start first grade two years behind their peers. Tiger Foundation believes that intervening during the first five years of life for children born into poverty and high-risk family environments is critical. The earlier a child is afforded opportunities for positive development, the greater the chances of long-term success. We invest in efforts to support young children both in their homes and in community-based centers, funding programs that offer parenting-skills training, health and wellness activities, and early education opportunities.

Vulnerable Youth

There are many young New Yorkers who are at risk of dropping out of school and embarking on the challenging path of seeking meaningful employment without academic credentials. We work with organizations that provide positive guidance for youth by discouraging high-risk behaviors, such as drug-use and too-early parenting, and support programs that help young people achieve educational goals and become engaged in the labor force. We do this work through support of a network of in-school and out-of-school programs, which work with young people on an ongoing basis over multiple years.

The Foundation also has a strong interest in programs supporting youth aging out of foster care. The moment when youth leave care represents a critical intervention point. 50% of youth aging out end up in jail or homeless, with 60% of females giving birth to a child within four years of leaving care. Tiger Foundation believes in the importance of providing the supports and tools youth need to become self-sufficient, and we support residential and non-residential programs for young adults in need of assistance developing the skills – and the financial capacity – to transition to independent lives.

Building Healthy Families

Family stability is a strong predictor of poverty, a crucial component of the foundation's mission is to provide assistance to low-income families struggling to regain productive lives and to support fragile families. We do this through support of reunification programs for families with children in the foster care system and through the funding of multi-service case management programs to help parents access the supports needed to provide for their children and keep families together. We seek organizations able to document their success with families as they struggle to improve the opportunities available to both parents and children.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE

The Criminal Justice Committee was established in 2008 to support the work of organizations and systems serving populations at various stages of justice involvement. Individuals involved with the criminal justice system face a host of challenges, often including low levels of education, lack of stable housing, histories of substance abuse and mental illness, and an immediate need to find employment. There is also a broader need for more effective public investment in programs that help incarcerated individuals, both prior to their release and immediately thereafter. The committee funds innovative programs that improve outcomes for New Yorkers as they emerge from justice involvement, and looks to support efforts to improve the effectiveness of the significant investment of public resources used to transition adults and young people from justice involvement to productive, stable, and healthy lives.

We pursue this strategy in the following ways:

- Investing in innovative direct services in New York City neighborhoods that can serve as alternatives to the placement of juveniles or adults in jail or prison.
- Support innovative direct services for adults and/or juveniles returning to their communities from jail or prison (employment, education, housing, substance abuse and mental health counseling, case management, etc.).
- Supporting policy work at the state and/or city level that directly leads to more efficient and effective use of public resources.

- Supporting research and demonstration efforts through private and public partnerships that serve as catalysts for building and/or scaling programs and system improvements.
