Proposals from deserving organizations that are registered as charities in India are reviewed for support for specific programs and support to social workers and activities they intend to pursue to help the poor and marginalized, and are in line with AID's mission and its 501(c)(3) status. After discussion of detailed budgets and project goals and objectives in chapter meetings that are open to public and/or Executive Board meetings, and communication with the NGOs and social workers that help address any questions raised by volunteers, they are voted on for approval. On approval, they are forwarded to a central Projects and Long-term Partners team that works with the Projects and Long-term Partners coordinators on the Executive Board, to ensure compliance with the 501(c)(3) standards, AID's mission, and ideology. Every group being considered for support or supported by AID is visited by volunteers and these independent visit reports are documented. The groups receiving support send detailed reports on progress of work and make available their financial and audit statements. The Board of Directors makes the final decisions in case any concerns or issues arise, and also works with the Executive Board to maintain oversight.
