1

Briefly describe the organization’s mission

Food Allergy Research & Education (FARE) is the nation's leading advocacy organization working on behalf of the 15 million Americans with food allergies, including all those at risk for life-threatening anaphylaxis. FARE’s mission is to improve the quality of life and the health of individuals with food allergies, and to provide them hope through the promise of new treatments. Our work is organized around three core tenets: LIFE - support the ability of individuals with food allergies to live safe, productive lives with the respect of others through our education and advocacy initiatives; HEALTH - enhance the healthcare access of individuals with food allergies to state-of-the-art diagnosis and treatment; and HOPE - encourage and fund research in both industry and academia that promises new therapies to improve the allergic condition.

	RESEARCH. In 4Q 2014, asked leading sites around the country if they wanted to apply for the FARE Clinical Network ('FCN'). Following a very strong response, applicants were asked to submit their applications in 1Q 2015. FARE expects that members of the FARE Clinical Network will serve as sites for clinical trials for the development of new therapeutics and will develop best practices for the care of patients with food allergies. FARE also expects that the FCN will also advance collaboration in the field as member centers will contribute to the development of a national food allergy patient registry and biorepositories. New Investigator and Mid-Career Awards. In 3Q 2014, FARE announced an RFP process aimed at attracting gifted early and mid-career investigators to the field of food allergy. FARE believes that these awards are an important step toward markedly increasing the number of investigators working in the field. The inaugural FARE Investigator in Food Allergy Awards will be awarded and funded in 2015. FARE began funding the following new research studies in 2014: A) Institute of Medicine Study: Food Allergies: Global Burden, Causes, Treatment, Prevention, and Public Policy (Consensus Study). FARE initiated this project with the Institute of Medicine and is the lead sponsor of this important study. FARE spent more than two years prior to the study's launch working with the Institute of Medicine to organize the topics to be explored, to help identify members of the expert panel that will be examining the issues and to nominate individuals to the volunteer patient advisory panel. Importantly, FARE also worked to secure a diverse array of co-sponsors to provide funding support for the study. Co-sponsors of the consensus study include the National Institutes of Health, the U.S. Department of Agriculture - Food and Nutrition Service, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, industry groups and patient groups. FARE funding took place in December 2014. When completed, this study will serve as a comprehensive report on the state of food allergy in the U.S. and will help raise awareness and provide essential information toward guiding future education, advocacy and research efforts. Among the key questions being considered by the consensus study committee: 1) Why are food allergies more common today than in the past? What are the implications of current trends in prevalence? 2) What are the key prenatal/early life determinants of food allergy? 3) Why are some individuals allergic to a single allergen while others to multiple allergens? 4) Are there ways to improve diagnosis? 5) What research gaps need to be filled in order to provide better guidance to healthcare providers and policy-makers? B) Fred D. Finkelman, McDonald Professor of Medicine, Professor of Pediatrics, U. of Cincinnati College of Medicine Study: Rapid Suppression of Food Allergy with Anti-FCεRIα Antibody. Summary: Dr. Finkelman's group at the University of Cincinnati and Cincinnati Children's Hospital published a paper in the June, 2013 issue of the JACI that describes a novel approach for suppressing IgE-mediated allergy: rapid desensitization with an antibody to the high affinity IgE receptor, FcεRI. The paper showed that this approach could completely suppress IgE-mediated anaphylaxis in mice and that it was longer lasting and less likely to be associated with side effects than rapid desensitization with an allergen. The goal of this proposal is to adapt this approach to people who have IgE-mediated disease, on making it work more rapidly (hours instead of days) and on making it even safer. The approach involves generating and modifying antibodies to human FcεRI and testing them in 2 sets of humanized mice, one that expresses human FcεRI instead of mouse FcεRI, the other that generates human mast cells, basophils and IgE. If successful, this approach could suppress all IgE-mediated disease, including IgE-mediated food allergy, more rapidly and completely than omalizumab and would work even in people who have high levels of IgE. C) Emily McGowan, ARTrust Award Recipient Study: Folic Acid Supplementation: A Risk Factor for the Development of Food Allergy? D) Dr. Sylvia Owusu-Ansah - Johns Hopkins Study: Determining the Prescription Fill Rate of Pediatric Patients Diagnosed with Anaphylaxis in the Pediatric Emergency Dept. E) Dr. Ruchi Gupta - Lurie Children's Hospital Study: Understanding Differences in Knowledge and Attitudes Around Food Allergy Thresholds and Food F) Dr. Ruchi Gupta - Lurie Children's Hospital Study: Retrospective Analysis of Sublingual Immunotherapy. In addition, FARE continued to fund ongoing clinical trials (Milk, Peanut OIT/SLIT, Multi Food Allergens, Wheat, Walnut), of promising new treatments, as well as epidemiological and basic research. The results of FARE-funded research studies were published in leading peer-reviewed scientific journals, including Allergy & Asthma Proceedings, Annals of Allergy and Immunology, JAMA Pediatrics, the Journal of Allergy and Clinical Immunology, and the Journal of Allergy and Clinical Immunology: In Practice.

4b	(Code) (Expenses $ 5,410,575 including grants of $ 234,065) (Revenue $)
	EDUCATION, AWARENESS & COMMUNICATIONS. FARE conducted food allergy education through both national and regional efforts. These education programs provided vital information on preventing and managing food allergy reactions, including the life-threatening reaction known as anaphylaxis. FARE's national education initiatives provide information for those living with food allergies, as well as those whose work is impacted by food allergies and the public. In 2014, FARE provided free educational information through its website (foodallergy.org) and blog, maintained an ongoing monthly webinar series on a variety of topics related to food allergy management, and distributed key educational materials such as "Your Food Allergy Field Guide," a comprehensive resource for newly diagnosed patients. FARE also hosted its annual Teen Summit, a national gathering of teens (ages 11-22) with food allergies, along with their parents and siblings, two College Summits to create comprehensive best practices for identifying and serving the needs of students with food allergies in every aspect of student life, and our National Food Allergy Conference and Leaders' Summit, which brought together individuals and families managing food allergies, caregivers, school staff, and health care professionals, giving them an opportunity to learn about advances in food allergy research and advocacy, best practices and practical skills for living well with food allergies. FARE also convened food allergy experts, emergency physicians, paramedics and EMTs, emergency medicine educators, policymakers and advocates for the Emergency Management of Anaphylaxis Summit in Chicago, outcomes of which included include recommendations for recognition and treatment of anaphylaxis by pre-hospital and emergency department personnel. FARE also continued its national training programs for restaurant workers to educate regarding serving diners with food allergies and launched the SafeFARE website and database as a resource for the hospitality industry and diners with food allergy. FARE's SafeFARE public awareness campaign, launched in April 2014 with TV and radio public service announcements starring celebrity chefs, brought significant attention to the unique issues food allergy families face when dining out. In 2014, these public service announcements aired more than 63,000 times, garnering more than 1.2 million impressions and more than $14 million in total donated media value. In addition, the TV PSA was shown on the CNN Airport Network, which reaches travelers at more than 2,100 gates at 49 airports from coast to coast, and the campaign reached 12.4 million online users. FARE continued managing a cooperative agreement with the CDC where we created user-friendly resources, tools and webinars based on the CDC guidelines. FARE also provided community funding awards to local food allergy advocates and leaders to support education and awareness programs in their local communities. These awards served a total of nearly 1 million people in 30 states. In partnership with the American College of Emergency Physicians (ACEP), FARE created the new Anaphylaxis Toolkit, a comprehensive resource to help answer questions about managing life-threatening allergies. Through our programs and outreach to media nationwide, FARE heightens awareness of food allergy as a significant and growing public health issue that demands urgent attention. In 2014, FARE's national FARE Walk for Food Allergy program brought together supporters in nearly 60 communities for family-friendly events focused on supporting the food allergy community's cause and increasing awareness of food allergy as a serious public health issue. In May 2014, FARE announced the creation of the first Food Allergy Action Month, expanding the traditional awareness week into an entire month of activities and actions supporters could take to help increase understanding of food allergies and make a positive difference in the lives of those managing the disease. In October 2014, FARE launched the Teal Pumpkin Project, a campaign designed to promote safety, inclusion and respect of individuals managing food allergies - and to keep Halloween a fun, positive experience for all. Resonating with communities across the country and around the world, the Teal Pumpkin Project reached nearly 7 million people on social media, was covered in more than 800 media outlets, and garnered participation from all 50 states, Washington, D.C., Puerto Rico and in six other countries. FARE's media outreach efforts resulted in coverage in more than 1,900 media outlets throughout the year. In the digital space, FARE's award-winning website received more than 2.5 million visits in 2014, FARE's bimonthly e-newsletter reached more than 130,000 subscribers, and FARE's growing social media presence continued to reach tens of thousands of users with important information about food allergies. In 2014, FARE issued 154 allergy alerts, which provide information about mislabeled or recalled food, and 11 ingredient notices, which are advance notifications of ingredient changes from food companies. For food allergy families, this is critical information to receive in order to prevent inadvertent reactions.

4c	(Code) (Expenses $ 710,838 including grants of $) (Revenue $)
	Advocacy and Public Policy. FARE devoted resources to addressing a range of public policy issues that affect Americans with food allergies and the entities that serve them. FARE has provided information and subject matter expertise to the Food and Drug Administration and National Institutes of Health, supported and helped initiate a consensus panel on food allergy at the Institute of Medicine. FARE also convened a coalition group of patient advocacy organizations regarding the steps that the airline industry can take to better accommodate passengers with food allergies. FARE continues to lead this coalition effort, and has worked with coalition partners to develop the key priorities we will work to address via direct work with airlines, Federal legislation, and other regulatory policy avenues. At the state level, FARE has been integral to the passage of laws that allow or require schools to stock auto-injectable epinephrine in 46 states, as well as 16 states that now allow public-serving entities to stock this lifesaving medication as well. FARE also helped pass laws to strengthen restaurant preparedness in food allergies in Virginia and Michigan.

Part IV

Section B. Type I Supporting Organizations

	Yes	No
1 Did the directors, trustees, or membership of one or more supported organizations have the power to regularly appoint or elect at least a majority of the organization's directors or trustees at all times during the tax year? If "No," describe in Part VI how the supported organization(s) effectively operated, supervised, or controlled the organization's activities. If the organization had more than one supported organization, describe how the powers to appoint and/or remove directors or trustees were allocated among the supported organizations and what conditions or restrictions, if any, applied to such powers during the tax year.
2 Did the organization operate for the benefit of any supported organization other than the supported organization(s) that operated, supervised, or controlled the supporting organization? If "Yes," explain in Part VI how providing such benefit carried out the purposes of the supported organization(s) that operated, supervised or controlled the supporting organization.

Section C. Type II Supporting Organizations

	Yes	No
1 Were a majority of the organization's directors or trustees during the tax year also a majority of the directors or trustees of each of the organization's supported organization(s)? If "No," describe in Part VI how control or management of the supporting organization was vested in the same persons that controlled or managed the supported organization(s).

Section D. All Type III Supporting Organizations

	Yes	No
1 Did the organization provide to each of its supported organizations, by the last day of the fifth month of the organization's tax year, (1) a written notice describing the type and amount of support provided during the prior tax year, (2) a copy of the Form 990 that was most recently filed as of the date of notification, and (3) copies of the organization's governing documents in effect on the date of notification, to the extent not previously provided?
2 Were any of the organization's officers, directors, or trustees either (i) appointed or elected by the supported organization(s) or (ii) serving on the governing body of a supported organization? If "No," explain in Part VI how the organization maintained a close and continuous working relationship with the supported organization(s).
3 By reason of the relationship described in (2), did the organization's supported organizations have a significant voice in the organization's investment policies and in directing the use of the organization's income or assets at all times during the tax year? If "Yes," describe in Part VI the role the organization's supported organizations played in this regard.

Section E. Type III Functionally-Integrated Supporting Organizations
