Form 990, Part X - Additional Information

Upon formation, the organization received a net equity transfer of securities that collateralized a note payable (which was also transferred). This net transfer is recorded on this return as a related party transfer and in the organization's accounting records as a fund balance transfer. While the debt is collateralized by the securities, it does not constitute acquisition indebtedness and the securities are not debt financed property. The securities were primarily acquired by the related party in 2005 following the disposition of an exempt asset (a hospital facility). The remaining securities were acquired by a related party in 2014 following the disposition of certain long term care facilities. The debt was incurred in 2012 and it was incurred to primarily to purchase equipment for a new hospital facility that opened in July 2012. Thus, none of the debt was incurred to acquire the investments; nor was any debt incurred before the investments were acquired that would not have been incurred but for the acquisition of the investments. Also, none of the debt was incurred after the acquisition of the investments that would not have been incurred but for such acquisition of the investments since the incurrence of the debt was not readily foreseeable at the time of the acquisition.

Finally, the debt does not constitute continued indebtedness since the investments were not acquired in connection with the disposition of the original debt financed assets.
