1 Program activities related to childhood obesity HopeLab refocused its efforts to scale the impact of its Zamzee product, an evidence-based technology product designed to measure and motivate physical activity in kids and families as a way to combat the trend toward sedentary behavior and obesity in the U S (www hopelab org/zamzee) An earlier large-scale randomized controlled impact trial of Zamzee indicated that middle-school-aged adolescents using Zamzee experienced an average increase in moderate-to-vigorous physical activity (MVPA) of 59% or approximately 45 additional minutes of MVPA per week compared to a control group The product launched as part of a for-profit social enterprise, Zamzee Co , established by HopeLab in 2011, however, HopeLab determined that philanthropic resources would be required to sustain development and delivery of the Zamzee product to consumers In 2014 HopeLab dissolved Zamzee Co , with staff and operations re-integrated into HopeLab as a department do	1,832,699
2 Program activities related to cancer HopeLab continued distribution and marketing activities to support use of its evidence-based Re-Mission 2 online games and mobile app designed to support treatment adherence in teens and young adults with cancer, Re-Mission 2 is the newest iteration of HopeLabs original Re-Mission video game released in 2006 The games are publicly available free of charge at the product website administered by HopeLab (www re-mission2 org), and the app is available as a free download via Google Play and iTunes HopeLab actively promoted Re-Mission 2 to young cancer patients, clinicians and health professionals, and the general public through conferences, speaking engagements, and social media marketing activities and continued to disseminate insights from Re-Mission/Re-Mission 2 research in order to catalyze broad development of evidence-based tools for social benefit	105,478
3 Programs activities related to resilience HopeLab continued to investigate the nature of resilience and its role in supporting both psychological well-being and physical health This portfolio of work is based on insights from scientific research illuminating the psychology of resilience, specifically experiences of purpose, connection and control that support individuals in persevering through adversity and responding to lifes challenges in healthy ways Projects included scientific studies, user-centered intervention design efforts, and product development initiatives in collaboration with partners HopeLab designed and developed the Mood Meter mobile app (www moodmeterapp com) in collaboration with researchers at the Yale Center for Emotional Intelligence, now available for download at Google Play and iTunes In collaboration with the Greater Good Science Center at the University of California, Berkeley, HopeLab began design and development of the Greater Good in Action online porta	3,209,060
4 Program activities related to secular ethics HopeLab continued work in its of projects exploring ways to foster ethical citizenship and compassionate action in the world This work is guided by several core values of the Omidyar Group (www omidyargroup com), of which HopeLab is part, these values include a deeply rooted belief in humanity, the conviction that every person should be treated with respect and dignity, and a vision for positive change powered by the individual HopeLab also initiated a project with schools in South Carolina, working directly with elementary school teachers to develop tools that would support students readiness to learn and the social and emotional skills that are the foundation of ethical engagement Work in this area also included the administration of grants to the Mind and Life Institute and the Dalai Lama Center for Ethics and Transformative Values at MIT	1,672,960
