Facts And Circumstances Test

Return Reference	Explanation
Part I Additional Information	ZYZZYVA History and Mission ZYZZYVA was founded in 1985 as a not for profit arts organization whose main project is publication of a journal of contemporary art and literature. Over the past 30 years, ZYZZYVA has grown into a critically acclaimed cultural platform of national significance. We bring some of the best and brightest writers and artists to a diverse national and international audience through a print journal, which is published three times a year, a vibrant year-round schedule of free readings and events, and our website, zyzzyva.org, which offers original writing, video podcasts, interviews, and criticism. Beneficiaries Many of contemporary literatures most lauded voices have launched their careers within the pages of ZYZZYVA, making it a reputable and pedigreed resource for new writers hoping to break through. Po Bronson, Chitra Divakaruni, Haruki Murakami, Jim Gavin and F X Toole all first appeared in the journal, ZYZZYVA was also an early publisher of Sherman Alexie, Molly Giles, Kay Ryan, Adrienne Rich, Raymond Carver and many others. In 2013 alone, five never before published writers made their debut in ZYZZYVA. One of those writers won a Pushcart Prize for the story we published, another was included in Best American Nonrequired Reading, and a third published a book with a small press. Unlike many small journals, we pay our authors for every piece we publish. ZYZZYVA therefore serves an important role in supporting contemporary authors and artists. Since 1985, ZYZZYVA has published 102 issues, bringing attention to emerging and established fiction and non-fiction writers, poets and visual artists. The journal is available in 119 bookstores nationwide, as well as 116 libraries. Work appearing in the journal has consistently been reprinted in literatures most notable anthologies and honored by dozens of awards and prizes. Works from our 2012 issues received re-publication in the 2013 anthologies of Best American Short Stories and Best American Essays, and 8 pieces were named to the Best American lists of Notables. Works from our 2013 issues were selected for the 2014 anthologies of Best New Poets, Best American Nonrequired Reading and awarded a Pushcart Prize. Writing published in ZYZZYVA has also garnered the O Henry Prize, and writers and artists highlighted in our journal have gone on to receive attention for their creative excellence from National Endowment for the Arts, Fulbright and Guggenheim Fellowships. Attraction of Public Support ZYZZYVA has always had a dedicated and engaged donor and subscriber base, and has always sought and received support from a variety of public sources. However, the sources of financial support for a literary organization are always hard to come by, especially given the limited resources of ZYZZYVA. Over the past four years, we have reinvented our grant-seeking program, our donor cultivation and interaction, and our fundraising campaigns (events, online, and mail campaigns). As a result, we have seen our individual donations grow from $14,000 in 2011, to more than $40,000 in 2013 a trend which we intend to continue and build upon. We have grant applications pending with several government and private funders. Our grant-seeking in 2014 resulted in a generous gift of support from the National Endowment for the Arts for our 2015 year, which will increase the organizations public support percentage. The public support percentage for 2013 and 2014 were 30.60% and 22.68% respectively, both of which are well in excess of the minimum 10% requirement, and we fully expect the percentage to increase going forward. Public Participation in Programs ZYZZYVA does more to engage a public audience than any other literary magazine of its size. On our own and in partnership with a diverse array of other arts organizations, we host or participate in up to two dozen events each year all of which (with rare exception) are free and open to the public. We reach a broad public audience through these events, most of which are attended at capacity, in 2015 we expect to reach about 350-700 people with live events. We also engage with the public through our vibrant, frequently updated website. There we offer original content (separate from what we publish in the journal) such as essays, video interviews with authors, book and theater reviews, and highlights from our archives, all of which is available to the public, for free. Our annual online audience is about 73,000. Recent Challenges and Growth Like many literary print journals in the 21st century, ZYZZYVA has faced its share of financial hurdles. The post-recession period was especially challenging, with our organization accruing operating deficits over multiple years. Upon assuming stewardship of ZYZZYVA in 2011, Editor Laura Cogan took several steps to strengthen the journals long-term viability and financial health, these steps were taken swiftly, but, as can be expected, their benefits take time to fully develop. To help the organization get back on its feet, several large donations were solicited in attempts to keep the organization solvent, which was successful - but such donations ultimately hurt the public support percentage necessary for public charity status. Unfortunately, we faced another setback in 2014 when we lost our office space lease after our rent was doubled. Although the rent on our new space is less expensive than it would have been to keep our old space, as is consistent with the upward trend in San Franciscos rental market, it is still far more than our rent in previous years. Higher earned income from sub-rentals and increased sales and donations were not enough to entirely offset this unexpected increase to our administrative expenses, leading ZYZZYVA to end 2014 with a small operating deficit. ZYZZYVA has taken vigorous steps to increase our financial health every year. We created and initiated our first year-end fundraising campaign in 2013, which led to a 20% increase in revenue that year and was even more financially successful in 2014. ZYZZYVA also launched, for the first time ever, an annual event fundraiser in 2014, which raised even more money in 2015. To help build these new programs, ZYZZYVA hired a development consultant to help develop our fundraising infrastructure an investment necessary to give us the tools to survive and grow as an organization. We are moving to end 2015 and future years in a healthy financial position by keeping our operating costs lean and continuing to build on contributed income with the strategies we developed in 2014. These strategies include continuing our work to increase our individual donor base, and aggressively pursuing other grant opportunities including government and private foundations. Our Board of Directors, though small, is a dedicated group of accomplished professionals from all backgrounds who see the value of this vibrant and productive arts organization, and support us in their various communities. Amid all these efforts, ZYZZYVA remains steadfast in our commitment to supporting our authors by paying them well, and to playing a vibrant role in the Bay Area arts community. For these reasons, ZYZZYVA should continue to qualify as a publicly supported charity.
