Land ConservationWe have protected more than 400,000 acres across Colorado, thanks to fantastic partnerships and visionary landowners. The permanent protection of those 400,000 acres ensures that valuable wildlife habitat, productive farms and ranches, irreplaceable scenic views, and vital wetlands and river corridors will be there for future generations. Because of the vast conservation need across the state, Colorado Open Lands has identified geographic priority areas in which to focus its land protection work and have the most impact. These Priority Landscapes were selected because they contain the ingredients we believe necessary for successful conservation: high conservation value, willing landowners, community partners, political support, and local funding. We use conservation easements as our primary method for protecting land. A conservation easement is a legal agreement (a formal promise) that ensures each property's unique conservation values are permanently protected. Ultimately, our work is possible because of our numerous partnerships with landowners, other charitable organizations, local governments, business people, funding agencies, and state and federal conservation programs.

Communications, Outreach and EducationColorado Open Lands is dedicated to forging a real connection between conserved lands and the people of Colorado. It is in that spirit that we offer a suite of education and outreach programs, designed to connect people to land and all the benefits it provides. We offer the following activities: expeditions on conserved properties, a directory of products and services from conserved lands, agricultural demonstration projects, increased hunting and fishing opportunities, farm to table events, and promotion of urban agriculture.

4c

(Code) (Expenses $ 255,927 including grants of $) (Revenue $)

StewardshipThe purpose of our Stewardship Program is to ensure that the conservation values (for example wildlife habitat, productive farmland, important stream corridor) of each conservation easement we hold are protected forever. By doing so, we ensure that the wishes of the conservation easement donor and the public's trust are upheld. This objective is met by maintaining close contact with current landowners, and by monitoring properties on an annual basis. Annual monitoring allows us to visit regularly with landowners, providing an opportunity to discuss the land, the conservation easement, and any needs, concerns or difficulties that the landowner may have. This regular communication helps to avoid misunderstandings and keeps new landowners informed. Colorado Open Lands maintains a model conservation easement Stewardship Program by staying current on new technology, testing new techniques, and sharing our progress with the land conservation community.
