Between July 2014 and June 2015, NightLight in Bangkok provided alternative employment, vocational training, spiritual development, meals, health care, and life-skills training to an average of 36 women who were exiting or at risk of exploitation in the sex industry. As part of their support, NightLight provided childcare for an average of 15 children under the age of 5 and tuition scholarship to 23 children. NightLight makes contact with several hundred women in prostitution and trafficking each year and offers assistance and intervention. 103 internationally trafficked victims were assisted and 18 were repatriated during the fiscal year. Additionally, 4 children of these women also received assistance. The shelter NightLight has been operational for victims of trafficking and sexual exploitation for the second year and houses many of the internationally trafficked women we assist. NightLight also addresses the sex-industry through activities in our outreach center in one of the major red-light districts of Bangkok. The coffee shop on the bottom floor of the outreach, now in its second year, provides jobs and has been a safe space to connect with the men that frequent the surrounding red-light district. In partnership with the MST project (Men and the Sex Trade), volunteers have had significant conversations with dozens of men a month at CityLight Cafe. The outreach center offers weekly English classes and quarterly medical clinics, and this year began to offer free salon services to the women who work in the area (hair, nails, and makeup) as another means of building relationships with these women, connecting them to resources and job opportunities. Bangkok continues to make twice weekly visits to the bars and to areas frequented by internationally trafficked women to make connections and offer help. 200 women per month. NightLight actively does awareness-raising through trainings, speeches, and media that reaches a global audience. NightLight Bangkok received almost 500 visitors this year who heard about the work of NightLight and learned about how to engage with the problem. NightLight partners with many other NGOs and government organizations to combat trafficking through investigation, intervention, assistance, shelter, and repatriation.
