Sustainable Fisheries Partnership Foundation (SFP) comprises approximately 70 staff and contractors working to engage and catalyze global seafood supply chains in rebuilding depleted fish stocks and reducing the environmental impacts of fishing and fish farming, with major projects in Asia, Europe, and North and South America SFP convenes, educates, and advises supply chain stakeholders including major retailers, restaurant chains, seafood brand owners, buyers, producers (fishers), NGOs, and fisheries management and scientific institutions to improve fisheries practices and policies (continued on Schedule O)(continued from page 2) A main component of SFP’s strategy includes improving access to information used to guide responsible seafood sourcing, and enhancing the ability of retailers, major seafood buyers, and producers to influence policy and practices to improve fisheries from which they source SFP implements this strategy through a number of tools, including by catalyzing and advising Fishery Improvement Projects (FIPs) and Aquaculture Improvement Projects (AIPs) A FIP or AIP is a collaboration among relevant stakeholders to influence policies and management practices and improve the sustainability of fishing and fish farming operations Once established, a FIP functions as a continuous improvement vehicle that aligns the interests of the supply chain It sets and implements its own improvement objective (using public workplans and measurable milestones) and is designed to be industry led and to outlive the initial involvement of NGOs such as SFP, functioning as long as necessary to achieve sustainability goals Worldwide, SFP is currently advising improvement in more than 85 FIPs and AIPs SFP also organizes fish buyers into supply chain roundtables (SRs) that take a direct interest in particular species and regions These roundtables also oversee the creation of fishery improvement projects in their areas and monitor progress An SR is a forum for processors, importers, and others that buy directly from a specific seafood sector to work together in a pre-competitive environment to achieve improvements in fisheries or aquaculture The SRs work to support existing improvement projects and help those that are struggling to make progress, as well as identifying areas where new projects are needed Currently, SFP works with approximately 19 supply chain roundtables SFP engages and educates the seafood supply chain by sponsoring annual Fisheries Forums in North America and Europe that provide opportunities for our partners and other stakeholders to meet, learn, share information and lessons learned, and decide strategies for achieving sustainable fisheries The forums are specifically scheduled to prepare our partners for the annual seafood expos in Boston and Brussels, where they make many of their purchasing decisions Participation in the Fisheries Forums has grown dramatically, and they have become an important component of SFP’s engagement with the seafood industry and other stakeholders with an interest in sustainable fisheries Another important information tool SFP uses to inform improvement in fisheries is its FishSource program—an online information resource that records the status of fish stocks and fisheries SFP created FishSource (www.fishsource.com) so that fisheries experts around the world could openly share their public scientific and technical information and provide major seafood buyers with up-to-date, impartial, actionable information on the status of fisheries and the improvements that are needed to become sustainable Currently, FishSource contains 1,922 live profiles of fisheries available to the public with another 600 in draft and under development
