Legacy Fellowship partners with an in-country NGO for community health projects. They are currently working in two communities.

Two Health Communities are continuing to operate, obtaining government recognition. In these two communities, almost 100

Community Health Educators have been trained. These Educators are helping raise awareness with 16 community associations representing almost 500 individuals. Topics include malaria prevention, diarrhea treatment and prevention, importance of clean water, health of pregnant women and newborns, and small-scale gardening. Much time has been devoted to the conception of teaching materials and translation into national languages that are appropriate for the members of the community.
