Oihana Holomoana is an academic program that seeks to maximize the academic outcomes of Native Hawaiian students through the development, refinement, and implementation of Hawaiian cultures based curriculum. Oihana Holomoana is also a maritime career pathways program, working to prepare youth academically for future careers in the maritime industry. Oihana Holomoana utilizes Hawaiian culture, voyaging traditions, and contemporary maritime skills in designing and implementing curriculum in reading, math, and science. Curriculum development is conducted in partnership with focus groups comprised of school teachers. Teachers at participating schools receive professional development training in using the curriculum and help to assess and refine the curriculum over time in order to maximize student academic outcomes. Last year Oihana Holomoana served over 240 participants through this programming.

Connecting Oceanic Pathways is a program that seeks to overcome challenging strains in the relationships between Native Hawaiian and Micronesian youth on the island of Oahu through the medium of cultural sharing. Native Hawaiian and Micronesian youth both face challenges stemming from the historical exploitation of their indigenous lands, some of which has caused a major increase in Micronesian immigration into Hawaii. Connecting Oceanic Pathways brings these two groups together to show them that Native Hawaiians and Micronesians have more similarities than differences. Program activities include instruction in traditional Hawaiian and Micronesian navigation.
