To enhance the academic experience for students, services were provided through the library, academic computing, The Powell Resource Center (for academic counseling, career services, personal counseling, skill development, testing resources, tutoring, workshops, and academic accommodations for students with documented disabilities), and the Office of the Academic Dean. Writing labs and quantitative labs were available to students on an ongoing basis. Academic areas of continued expansion included a marching band program (the only one in the ODAC conference), the Occupational Therapy and Physician Assistants programs in the new School of Health Sciences, and Project Ampersand, which is a project-based learning environment in the core curriculum.
