The work NAMI NC does to support and educate families through its Family to Family (F2F) classes, Basics classes, and family support groups is remarkable in the outcomes it achieves - families who can support their loved one with mental illness through their newly acquired knowledge and skill sets. We believe that the rate of institutionalization for the loved one goes down for families who have had this training. Certainly their quality of life goes way up. Most people say it changes their lives, and gives them newfound coping abilities. The Family to Family psycho educational program as well as the Basics program is on a fast track with SAMSHA to recognize it as an evidence based practice. Already SAMSHA recognizes family psycho education as one of six evidence based practices. F2F is a free 12

The second major program area for NAMI NC is that of consumer supports and educational services. We offer Peer to Peer, a 9 week recovery oriented psycho educational program free for those living with mental illnesses, led by two individuals in recovery. Those taking this class learn about recovery- what they can do to maximize their own recovery, how to develop a crisis plan, and an advance directive. We also offer a Connection group- a support group offered by two individuals in recovery. The achievement or outcome realized through these two programs is an improvement in the quality of life of those living with mental illnesses- they learn to mitigate or prevent altogether their crises and hospitalizations, they learn how to actively participate in making their own recovery be the best it can be. Often a good crisis

The third major program area is advocacy and affiliate development. We advocate for an improvement in the quality of life for all those living with mental illness through legislative change, rule change, and other public policy endeavors. This past year we added NAMI Smarts, an advocacy training program to teach people in our grassroots skills in how to be an advocate as well as Mental Health First Aid- directed at the public, to teach them how to respond to someone in a mental health crisis. During the General Assembly session we worked to protect open access to medications. We continued efforts to participate in an advisory committee to the Prisons to combat injustices to those with mental illness with a great deal of success: CIT in Corrections expanded, as did the hiring of more qualified professionals, the experienced trying to navigate the mental health system in North Carolina. The outcome achieved is a sense of being able to cope- that we are there to help, and available for consultation, information, or referral, or just available to listen. We share information on resources, answer questions, link people to the right place, and offer lots of educational information on diagnostic conditions and treatment resources. Often the Helpline call is the first portal for people getting the services and supports they need in North Carolina. It is literally a lifeline for people. Yet another educational service we offer is our In Our Own Voice Program that fights the stigma of mental illness by training individuals with the illness to speak about their journey of recovery to the general public. Nothing is more effective in getting through fear and ignorance by putting a face on a personal story.
