Research at the Institute focuses on understanding the genetic control of normal development and susceptibility to neurological diseases using the mouse as the model system. The Institute also offers research internships for students and teachers.

(Code) (Expenses $ 2,077,374 including grants of $) (Revenue $ 1,013,883)

During Fiscal Year 2016, Institute scientists and staff continued their research into the genetics of degenerative nerve diseases. Institute investigators led or collaborated on thirteen different projects, working with partners in Bangalore, San Francisco, Seattle, Boston, New York, and Bozeman, Montana. Most work focused on diseases caused by propagation of protein misfolding that include frontotemporal dementia and Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, Huntington's, and prion diseases, results were published in peer-reviewed scientific journals. The Institute received $275,000 in new grants and renewals to fund this work, including two new NIH subawards. The Institute also continued its work funded by a two-year, matching grant of $904,500 from the State of Montana Department of Commerce with the goal of speeding translation of basic research on Alzheimer's disease and related dementias to patient care or disease prevention by establishing the Montana Center for Aging Research & Memory Care. This grant supports the Institute's research into memory disorders and neurodegeneration and lays the groundwork for collaborations with Benefis Health System, physician-scientists and other organizations committed to health and elder care, drawing on the research institute's extensive background in the study of the molecular and genetic causes of human dementia arising from the neurodegenerative Alzheimer's and Parkinson's diseases, as well as prion disorders such as Creutzfeldt-Jakob and Fatal Familial Insomnia. Institute scientists are also pioneering new approaches to track survival and function of transplanted central nervous system stem cells in mice that will enable studying disease process in human cells integrated into a living brain. In addition to project-specific grants from federal and state agencies and collaborators, the Institute continued its community outreach to enhance public understanding of science and medicine. As a result of this outreach and its fundraising efforts in Great Falls and around Montana, the Institute received donations totaling $1.675 million, including two significant bequests, to support its research.

(Code) (Expenses $ 19,190 including grants of $ 9,531) (Revenue $ 0)

The Institute serves as a resource for science education in a rural region lacking a research university. Summer internships for high school students and teachers have long been available at the Institute. The goals of the Institute's education programs are to foster critical thinking, enhance science literacy, and help train the next generation of scientists. After a six-year, $517,000 grant from the Howard Hughes Medical Institute for a novel program to enhance science education ended in Fiscal Year 2014, the Institute returned to its original structure of two to three summer internships in Fiscal Years 2015 and 2016. In summer 2015, two pre-college students and one undergraduate participated in the Institute's laboratory internship programs, working with research staff using the neurosphere model to study prion susceptibility and infection. Institute faculty, postdoctoral fellows and research assistants worked with and trained the students in various lab processes, including immunostaining and imaging. While the HHMI project has been completed, the Institute is committed to continuing its long tradition of training and support for local students and teachers and continues to raise funds that specifically support these programs.
